SCHOOLS VOTE $50,000,000 BOND ISSUE

Cermak Appointee Denounces Plan.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Upon the suggestion of Trustee Albert F. Carr that the purchase of school sites and the erection of buildings should be investigated by the citizens' body, the board of education yesterday postponed the plan of Trustee Joseph H. Savage to issue $50,000,000 in bonds for more sites and new schools. It is part of the plan to spend the money within 18 months, which in normal procedure would require seven years.

Approval of the bond proposal was voted by a vote of 5 to 2. Mrs. Ella Flagg Young and Mr. Carr, trustees opposed by Mayor Cermak, constituted the opposition. Trustee Carter H. Harrison was absent, but Trustee Harrison said that the absentee favored the bond plan.

Denies Carr Assails Plan.

Trustee Carr referred several times to the charges, also as "cheap politics." At one point in his attack on the plan of the board is [illegible] "I am not yet we are proposing to request the public to buy $50,000,000 in bonds for us to spend in eighteen months. We had better erect one building first and show the public what we have done with their money, and what is to be done in design, construction, and price, before we attempt anything so enormous. We cannot at present borrow money to run the schools and pay the teachers, yet we are planning out on a very extravagant program. There is too much cheap politics in this."

Trustee Young retorted that he never played cheap politics. Then he accused the mayor's friends, evidently including Mr. Carr, of playing politics.

Denies Statement.

With the charges of politics flying back and forth, President Lewis E. Wolfe of the school board made this statement:

"I do not know politics, I'm not interested in it. I'm not going to stand on the outside with any faction or party in these political shots. Rather than be the victim of politics, you will have to get some one else to wield the gavel. On the resolution let me say that nothing will come of it. There isn't sufficient time left to get it favorably from the legislature."

It also was said that Mayor Cermak had replied that the majority on the board refused to slap him, the board was ready to permit the mayor's school commission to investigate the schools and then voted to engage the Cleveland Audit company to make a comprehensive inquiry. The company's first investigation covered a period of a half weeks and was ordered by the auditors not to have [illegible]

Vote 7 to 6 for New Audit.

The new investigation was ordered by a vote of 7 to 6 on motion of Trustee H. Wallace Caldwell. Trustees Carr and Blatchford were absent when the vote was taken and Mrs. Young and President Myers voted [illegible]

The investigation by the mayor's school commission, urged by Mrs. Young, was pigeonholed by a vote of 7 to 6—the trio in favoring such an action being President Myers, Mrs. Young and Mr. Carr, with Trustee [illegible]

The board had listened all day to protests of teachers and others against the elimination of jobs, functions, and automatic increases in salaries, all of which had been recommended by the Audit company. Trustee Young had the floor at the beginning of the afternoon session.

Company Reemployed.

Characterizing the Cleveland company's report as "discriminatory and incomplete." Without more ado the board voted to reemploy the company to make the sort of an audit it had outlined in the report. Later one member said that if the Cleveland auditors did the work they suggest as necessary it will be laboring for [illegible] or more.

The $50,000,000 bond issue came before the board. Mrs. Young declared that there were [illegible] present at he morning session ready to speak against the proposal, but that they departed under the impression that the subject had been deferred until Friday.

"I protest that it is unfair to stampede through," said Mrs.

CLEW IN LONDON TO FAITHFULL DEATH PUZZLE

Cremation Halted at Last Moment.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—The cremation of Starr Faithfull was dramatically halted this afternoon when new witnesses were found who are confident they can supply information concerning the last hours of the Greenwich Village cocktail girl whose partly clad body was found Monday in the Long Beach surf. The [illegible]den and somewhat mysterious interruption of the last rites by District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county definitely establishes the girl's strange death as murder, and with the new clews culled from the girl's silk-bound diary gives it added importance.

Tomorrow the case will enter its first formal phase when fifteen witnesses who already have been summoned appear before the Nassau grand jury and tell what they know of Starr's unconventional life and tragic end.

Rich Politicians Involved.

New details of the girl's love life, in which wealthy men with high political influence, hitch hike rides on ocean liners and wild evenings in midtown hotels figured, were brought out in today's investigation. Not all of them were made public. None of the fantastic, tangled clews developed earlier have been eliminated—they merely have been added to the new developments.

Cryptic prophecies of still greater sensations to come were made by Mr. Edwards, who charged that Stanley E. Faithfull, the dead girl's drink-mixing stepfather, was not telling "all he knows." The prosecutor also hinted that "Tucker" Faithfull, who sometimes calls herself Sylvia, might have been her sister's companion on a wild foursome which ended in a murder.

"Tucker is being very mysterious about her movements over the last week-end," Mr. Edwards said. "Remember, Starr Faithfull went to meet two men before she disappeared."

Tells Sister of Party.

"Tucker" told investigators this afternoon that Starr had gone on a pier party a few nights before she disappeared and upon returning home had said to her:

"Gee, I had a wonderful time with two men I met on the Franconia. I am going on another little party with them."

Dispatches from London threw an even more fantastic light upon the past life of the dead girl and her family. The visit of Starr, her sister "Tucker" and her mother, Mrs. Helen Wyman Faithfull, to London last fall was recounted. While the mother and sister were living in comparative poverty in a cheap quarter of London, the dispatches quoted a "peer's son" as saying Starr was living mysteriously apart from them, playing about London with influential friends, and wearing costly clothing. She appeared to have plenty of money at her disposal.

Artist Starr's Friend.

Another dispatch from London, which came over the wires of the Associated Press, quotes Rudolph Haybrook, a scenic artist, as saying in an interview that Starr Faithfull was murdered "because she was to have been the principal witness in a $25,000 settlement case which would have caused a sensation when it came to court."

The artist, according to the London newspapers, was engaged to the dead girl's sister and was Starr Faithfull's closest friend abroad.

The diary, which was found in the Faithfull home by a detective, played an important part in today's investigation. Although Mr. Edwards would not confirm it, it was reported that the diary contained several references to "A. J. P." and that these letters were believed to be the initials of Andrew J. Peters, former mayor of Boston, who is related by marriage to the girl's mother.

The diary and its dynamite contents caused Mr. Edwards to decide on immediate presentation of the evidence to the grand jury. Penned in tight, cramped handwriting were a series of

Bomb Arouses Oak Park and Jury Foreman

Eight lives were endangered and damage of more than $7,000 was done by an unusually powerful dynamite bomb which was exploded at 12:15 o'clock this morning in the rear of the Thomas L. Harrigan auto sales rooms at 438 Madison street, Oak Park.

The blast was so heavy it drove fragments of iron piping through the opposite exterior walls of one house and beyond them through the wall of a second house. Other particles of the piping penetrated two new automobiles after passing through a two inch thick plank. In addition, windows in houses and apartments more than a block away were shattered.

Grand Jury Foreman on Scene.

Hundreds of Oak Parkers were attracted to the scene. Among them was Frank E. O'Dowd of 241 Wesley avenue, foreman of the June county grand jury. He personally investigated the case and announced that this bombing, and two others, all in the same general area in the last three nights, would be taken up as the first business of the grand jury on Monday.

The bomb was devised in a two inch pipe and evidently tossed through an alley window into the service department. It exploded a few minutes later, damaging half a dozen new automobiles to the extent of $4,000, tore holes in the concrete floors and walls of the show rooms, and created general destruction all around. This damage was estimated at $2,000.

Damage to nearby buildings, mostly through broken glass, was estimated at $1,000. The nearest structure is the two story frame house at 431 South Elmwood avenue, just across the alley from the garage. The first floor is occupied by Mrs. Harriet M. Carpenter, her children, Oliver, 12 years old, and Robert, 10, and her mother, Mrs. Lillian Kleinman, 75. The upper story is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William A. McGuineas and their sons, Marshall, 8, and Bruce, 5.

Residents Are Perilled.

All were asleep when the bomb exploded. The blast rocked the house. Bits of the torn pipe whistled through the bedroom window of Mrs. Carpenter. Other fragments tore through the south wall, sailed across the rooms and penetrated the north wall. They continued across a lot and penetrated the south wall of the home of V. V. Parshall at 425 South Elmwood avenue. Other bits sprayed and penetrated the house from the basement to the attic. The Carpenters and McGuineases were hurled from bed by the blast and their homes filled with smoke.

Grand Jury Foreman O'Dowd and Lieut. William Koerber questioned Harrigan, owner of the sales agency. He knew of no reason, he said, for the attack. O'Dowd later said he would quiz every one whose home was bombed recently.

"Three bombings in three days in this area is too much," he asserted. "The grand jury will go into the matter immediately when it meets Monday on racket cases."

The other two bombings were at the home of Mrs. Martin E. Dean at 122 South Menard avenue and at the new plant of the Warshawsky auto accessories company at 5655 West Madison street. Damage in these cases was small. No motive for either was assigned.

HOUSE PASSES REMAPPING BILL ON G. O. P. LINES

Senate Is Expected to Concur.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Congressional reapportionment passed the house late today by a vote of 79 to 66. It had two more than the necessary majority of 77. It received the vote of 77 Republicans and 2 Democrats.

DAVID SHANAHAN.

The measure now goes to the senate, where the Republicans regard it as having clear sailing next week. They claim 33 votes are lined up for it, or seven more than the 26 votes needed to pass it. It carves Illinois into 27 new congressional districts. The remap has been sidestepped by legislatures for twenty years.

The bill was put through the house on almost strict party lines. The two Democrats who voted for it were John M. Bolton and L. C. O'Brien of Chicago. The four Republicans who lined up with the Democrats and voted against it were John Acker [Savanna], Ole E. Benson [Ottawa], Harry M. McCaskrin [Rock Island], R. G. Soderstrom [Streator]. After Speaker Shanahan had announced passage of the redistricting bill, the usual clinching motions were carried to table a motion to reconsider.

Ends Filibuster by Democrats.

The action lifted the filibuster by the Democrats which had been clamped on the house since noon yesterday, and which was spreading to the senate. After a Democratic house caucus and a conference between Speaker Shanahan, Minority Leader Igoe, Republican Leader Little, and others, an agreement was made that the reapportionment bill be made a special order for this afternoon and be put to an immediate vote. It lifted a filibuster which had taken the form of having the journal read at length—an hour's process—and a hint that insistence would be laid on the provision requiring all bills to be read at length.

The only debate on the passage of the bill came in form of remarks in explanation of votes. The Democrats assailed the bill as a Republican gerrymander. The Republicans said it was the best bill that could be mapped under the conditions and that it enabled the legislature to perform a task that had been overdue for twenty years.

Unites Republican Members.

Gov. Emmerson's announcement that he desired passage of reapportionment threw the administration forces behind the measure, and the result was a measure of Republican solidarity among the members not achieved before during the session.

Gov. Emmerson tonight sent a message of congratulation to the house. It read:

"To the Republican members of the house of representatives: I extend congratulations for the victory achieved by them today in passing the bill providing for congressional reapportionment.

"Seventy-nine votes—two more than the required majority—were cast for the measure. Of the seventy-nine seventy-seven were Republicans.

"Actuated solely by political motives, and in accordance with a decision reached at a caucus, the minority group used every means in its power to defeat the measure. That it failed is due to the steadfastness of the Republican members.

"The fairness of the reapportionment outlined in the bill cannot be questioned. Enactment of the measure into law would give Illinois its first congressional reapportionment in thirty years."

Forms Metropolitan Area.

The remap, which now goes to the senate, carves the state broadly into a metropolitan area, embracing Cook, Lake, Will and Du Page counties, which is given 14 of the 27 seats and has 57 per cent of the population, and the remainder of the state divided into 13 districts. The

RIDES ON TOP 'L' TRAIN; BRUSHED OFF AND MAY DIE

Ray Orthman, 19 years old, 1140 Marianna street, was the victim of an unusual accident early this morning which probably will cost him his life. With his chum, John Cushing, 3350 North Marshfield avenue, he has been in the habit of going fishing early in the mornings. This morning, however, they decided that they would get some fresh air by taking a ride a-top of an elevated train.

They climbed to the top of the "L" structure at Southport avenue station and when a Ravenswood train came along jumped to the top of one of the cars. The train had gone but a short distance when a tree brushed Orthman from the car. Cushing rode to the next station, got off and went home. There he became worried about Orthman and told a relative about the matter. Police were notified and Orthman was found unconscious in the rear yard of 3414 Southport avenue. He was taken to Alexian Brothers hospital where it was found his back was broken and he was suffering from other probably fatal injuries.

Walthers and Kingman barely had time to take to the White Cap's little rowboat tender and were in danger of swamping any moment while the actor yachtsman, a coast guard cutter and the steamship Avalon bound to Catalina island raced to the burning boat.

Washburn, Wis., June 11.—[Special.]—Confronted by a pack of eight wolves chasing a deer, Axel Trocksted, 57, farmer-journalist, was forced to climb a tree along the main highway near Washburn to keep out of danger.

While perched in the tree top, Trocksted hailed a passing motorist and managed to get into the automobile without being attacked by the wolves.

Trocksted is a correspondent for the Skandinaven, a Scandinavian newspaper printed in Chicago.

Let Students Peek at Books in New Exams

Seventeen selected freshmen students at the University of Chicago, members of a class in literature, learned yesterday what a comprehensive examination means. The comprehensive exam is substituted for the usual quarterly quiz and will be generally adopted through the university next fall, when the general educational reorganization takes place.

College students and alumni familiar with the old type of examinations, where the student was asked to remember the date of Shakespeare's death and the professor's particular likes and dislikes, may not be able to credit the fact that the students under examination were permitted at will to look in the books they had studied and to consult all the notes they had made during the lectures.

"Pony" Made Legitimate.

These things were permitted in yesterday's tests. In other words the dishonored "pony" has, in a sense, been made legitimate.

And, according to the students themselves, the examination was satisfactory, not too difficult, and a fair test of their general knowledge of the literature of the western world from the days of ancient Greece to the city states of the medieval ages and the Renaissance.

No premium was placed on memory, as in the old time quizzes. Instead the students were asked to demonstrate that they had grasped the underlying significance of the words and the writers they had studied.

The written examination, given first, was divided into two sections. In the first section a choice was given. The student could either "discuss the Renaissance in the light of the books of this course," or, "starting with Homer, take each book in the course and make a list of all the other books which it has influenced or to which it is related in some way."

A Choice for Student.

In the second section were nine propositions, any two of which the student could answer as his stint. Some of these were:

"Write an introduction to a book entitled 'Plato and the Platonists.'"

"Characterize as Romans Cicero, Marcus Aurelius, Lucretius, Vergil, and Dante."

"State the conception of the good life and the good state according to Plato and Aristotle, Cicero and Aurelius, Dante and Machiavelli."

"Write the table of contents and the preface for a book entitled 'Orthodoxy and Heresy from Augustine to Aquinas.'"

Prof. E. Stringfellow Barr of the University of Virginia is to mark the written papers. The class has been conducted by Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the university, and Prof. Mortimer Adler. Oral examinations by Prof. Barr will be held today.

MR. HODGMAN DISAPPOINTS 2 TRUSTING THUGS

Crosby G. Hodgman, 1423 Hudson avenue, an instructor in the Chicago Latin school, will be able to leave today on his vacation trip to Boston despite the alertness of two bandits who saw him exhibit a well filled purse yesterday, trailed him to a dentist's office in the loop, and held him up.

What the bandits failed to discover until the holdup was that Hodgman had spent all but $16 of the bank roll for tickets at the consolidated railroad ticket office, where the gunmen saw his money. They got the $16, however, and also $37 from Dr. George E. Taylor, 1450 Elmdale avenue. The holdup took place in Dr. Taylor's office at 25 East Washington street, where Hodgman had gone to meet his wife. The dentist told Detective Ralph McKenna that the robbers missed $300 which he had set aside to pay his taxes.

EDW. B. M'LEAN, WASHINGTON, D.C., PUBLISHER, ILL

Washington, D. C., June 12.—(AP)—Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, was said last night by his physician to be "seriously but not critically" ill.

Dr. James A. Gannon was summoned to McLean's home Monday after the publisher had complained of abdominal pain while playing on his private golf course.

The doctor diagnosed the trouble as myocarditis, inflammation of the muscles of the heart. He said his patient would be confined to his bed for several weeks. Overexertion was blamed.

Fire and Blast Destroy West Side Delicatessen

Flames of mysterious origin followed by an explosion early this morning destroyed the delicatessen operated under the name of Morris Shier at 409 South Crawford avenue. Windows in the entire three story building and in neighboring structures were shattered. Police were mystified as to the cause of the explosion, but were inclined to believe it was gasoline. Chief Dennis Curtin of the 25th battalion said he would ask the fire attorney to investigate. Police said the place is owned by Max Adelman, 3949 West Jackson boulevard.

downstate districts are those as printed in THE TRIBUNE today and the metropolitan districts follow the map recently published, with a few minor changes to straighten out boundary lines.

If the measure passes the senate, Republicans maintain it will serve to keep this general assembly from falling into the category of flops. Next to repeal of the state prohibition act, which met with a veto, it is listed as the biggest piece of legislation of the session.

In the senate the remap bill will be in charge of Senator Richard J. Barr [Rep., Joliet], who headed the senate half of the subcommittee that made the redraft. In the house the bill was handled by Mr. Roderick and Richard J. Lyons [Rep., Mundelein], chairman of the committee on congressional apportionment.

Revived by Democrats.

It was encountering hard going in the house when it was revived by the action last week of the Democratic caucus, which voted against a remap this year on the theory that a Democratic landslide in 1932 might give them control of the legislature and enable the enactment of a Democratic remap in 1933. This stirred up the Republicans; alterations in the tentative districts were made; Gov. Emmerson came out with his demand that the state be reapportioned, and the Republicans lined up to recarve the state now while they control the assembly.

Sol Roderick [Rep. Chicago], head of the subcommittee which framed the remap, sought to make a speech when he called the bill up, but objections came from Minority Leader Igoe and other Democrats.

"Speeches are not in keeping with the agreement," said Igoe.

Roderick got into a brief controversy with Speaker Shanahan which was punctuated with many loud raps of the gavel and for which Roderick later apologized to the house. And the roll call began.

"This is not a perfect bill," said Roger F. Little [Rep., Urbana], "but you cannot make a remap which will satisfy everybody. But this new map does away with the two congressmen at large, and it does the best we can to redistrict."

"It is twenty years overdue," said Roderick; "our oath of office makes reapportionment mandatory. This is a question of doing our duty."

Snell Attacks Measure.

An onslaught on the measure came from Truman A. Snell [Dem., Carlinville].

"This bill is a Republican baby," he said. "It has nothing but Republican finger prints on it. It is a Republican gerrymander. It makes one shoestring district that runs one-third across the state. You Republicans will get a verdict from the people on this in 1932."

A diversion was created when the Democrats chased a lobbyist off the floor. "Do your lobbying on the other side," said Igoe, as the sergeant at arms led the lobbyist outside.

"It's unfortunate that this vital question of reapportionment," said Elmer Schnackenberg [Rep., Chicago], "should fall into a party controversy. The people are vastly interested in reapportionment. I regret that one of our great parties took a position against reapportionment at this time."

The roll call was finished and verified by the clerk.

Expect Passage in Senate.

Cheers were raised from the Republican side, and the house plunged back into its other business.

With Gov. Emmerson at its back, the bill is regarded as more than probable of passage by the senate, as the upper chamber is even under stronger administration influence than the house. The senate has 33 Republicans and 18 Democrats, a Republican majority of 15.

The present twenty-five congressional districts were created thirty years ago, and the failure to reapportion during the last twenty years on the basis of the federal census is the reason why two congressmen are elected at large.

At present Cook and Lake counties with 53 per cent of the population have only 10 of the district congressmen, while the remap would give the metropolitan area with 57 per cent of the population 14 of the 27 seats.

CERMAK LICENSE BILL FORWARDED AFTER PROTESTS

Final Passage Is Not So Certain.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—One plank in Mayor Cermak's plan for legislative relief to Chicago—the license bill—went forward in the senate today, passing from second to third reading.

This favorable action, however, was not regarded by supporters of the bill as forecasting its eventual success. All revenue legislation, they fear, will be left for the special session which will probably convene later in the hot months.

During the day progress in the house was reported on the course of the bills carrying the revenue program of the Chicago Real Estate board. These would accomplish three things: Postpone the date on which delinquent taxes would become due; provide for semi-annual payment of taxes, and fund the 1930 tax levy by means of a bond issue maturing over 20 years.

Hold Night Conference.

A night conference was held in Attorney General Carlstrom's office between M. S. Winfing, assistant attorney general; William Wilharts, general counsel for the real estate board; Hayden Bell, tax expert for the Cook county commissioners; Douglas Sutherland of the Civic Federation, and H. H. Haylett, business manager of the real estate board.

It was the purpose of this conference to work out amendments to the plan that would be satisfactory to all groups. The bill will probably be on second reading in the house tomorrow.

As they gathered, Mr. Bell handed Mr. Wilharts an opinion which stated, in part, "in my opinion there exists no reasonable question of the legality of the plan, and in this opinion I am fortified by the opinion of the attorney general of this state."

The senate considered the Cermak license bill in committee of the whole, listening, in the main, to lobbyists for industries which would be eligible to licensing by the bill and spokesmen for the Illinois Manufacturers' association and kindred organizations.

Minority Leader Courtney was the principal proponent of advancement and put the motion that sent the bill to third reading.

David R. Clarke of Chicago spoke for the manufacturers' association. The association appreciates the problems that face Chicago, he said, but to license all businesses to obtain revenue would be only to impose a new and additional tax.

"It is the greatest grant of unrestricted taxing power this assembly was ever asked to give," he said, adding, "eighty per cent of the manufacturers in the association are small operators, already struggling desperately and losing money."

"Let me ask you," Courtney inquired, "has the Illinois Manufacturers' association ever suggested one plan to Mayor Cermak for the financial relief of Chicago?"

Mr. Clark admitted that it hadn't, but said that several members were serving on the mayor's advisory commission.

H. B. Hostetler of the Chicago Carbonated Beverage Dealers' association was next. He mentioned that his product could be made cheaper in Indiana than in Illinois.

"Wait a minute," interrupted Senator Peter Kiolminski [Dem., Chicago]. "If you can make it cheaper in Indiana, why don't you move down there and do it?"

"Why, my dear sir," said Hostetler, "Chicago is our home. We live there."

"O, well, you're in business now," replied Kielminski. "You can't let that interfere. You're out to make money."

Louis A. Dumont of the Chicago Association of Commerce said the bill was not approved by members of the association.

Sees Industries Moving.

C. S. Craigmile, general superintendent of the Belden Manufacturing company, Chicago, makers of insulated wire, said that threats of such legislation as the license bill had driven his company to move one of its factories to Richmond, Ind.

When he had finished Senator Arthur A. Huebsch [Rep., Brookfield] moved that the senate rise and report progress on the bill. This passed and Courtney followed by moving that the bill be sent to third reading.

"But before you vote on that," he said, "let me answer all these gentlemen briefly. The mayor of Chicago is asking the power to regulate and license business—he has no desire to hurt business. The Illinois Manufacturer's association is using the same argument it presented against the woman's eight hour law. It ill behooves you to talk of this bill as another tax when you haven't advanced a single suggestion for the mayor's consideration."

Courtney's last remark was directed at James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the association, who sat across the chamber.

The minority leader also read an opinion from Corporation Counsel Sexton of Chicago, holding that the bill was constitutional, in answer to claims that it was outside the law.

SANITARY BOARD CIVIL SERVICE BILL DEFEATED

Senate Debate Based on 1932 Campaign.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—The political campaign of 1932 and the coming struggle between Republicans and Democrats for the presidency, state offices, legislative and local offices, pranced into the senate today. After prolonged debate on the glories of the rival parties, a bill for civil service in the sanitary district of Chicago was killed.

The Republicans argued it would perpetuate 3,000 Democratic precinct captains in jobs. The Democrats countered that less than half that number of jobs are on the rolls, and that the G. O. P. is committing harakiri by knocking civil service.

The Republicans argued that the bill under discussion did not follow the merit order set up in state civil service and in other merit laws.

Courtney Bill Advanced.

As a curtain raiser the senate advanced the Courtney bill for a reapportionment of legislative districts to third reading, after Cook county Democrats had ripped into downstaters for opposing redistricting. It was indicated the bill is likely to pass the senate, but on the idea it has no chance in the house, and the senators might as well avoid taking an unnecessary rap.

The discussion brought out a feeling among senators that the assembly will not get through June 20, but may remain here until July 1 or longer, as the house calendar is almost a yard long, with measures of the judicial advisory councils and the election reform bills.

When Minority Leader Courtney asked for advancement of the legislative reapportionment bill, Senator Epler Mills [Rep., Virginia], sought to delay it, but was beaten, 31 to 14. It precipitated a long debate. It was renewed over the civil service bill.

Called 1932 Argument.

"This has degenerated into a debate over 1932," objected Senator James O. Monroe [Dem., Collinsville]. "We ought to cut out dilatory bunk and get down to work. I can't see why Republicans should object to Democrats going under civil service. Then the employés can tell the bosses to jump in the lake, and vote Republican if they ever wanted to."

"I'm not for a bill to perpetuate 3,000 Democratic precinct captains in jobs," said Senator Roy C. Woods [Rep., Chicago], "and while you Democrats have been saying you could have prevented world-wide depression, the Democratic national party is unable to pay off its deficit in its campaign fund."

"We're not so dumb on the minority side," said Thomas Courtney [Dem., Chicago]. "We can see that you Republicans are building your own funeral pyre for 1932."

Guessing at Voters.

"Political parties no longer are the main interest with the voters," said Senator Harold Kessinger [Rep., Aurora]. "It's individuals now that count with the electorate."

"Well," said Courtney, "this legislature today seems to have turned into two party caucuses. Vital affairs are suffering from the playing of politics down here."

The vote killing the civil service bill was 15 to 6. A necessary majority is 26.

Doctor Witness for Capone Files Heitler Estate Claim

Dr. David V. Omens, 1225 Independence boulevard, who was a defense witness for Al Capone in his contempt trial in the federal court, filed a claim for $1,000 yesterday in the Probate court against the estate of "Mike de Pike" Heitler, notorious brother keeper. Administration papers were issued last week on Heitler's estate, estimated at $250,000, on the supposition that he was the man whose body was found burned after a gang ride near Barrington six weeks ago. Dr. Omens holds a promissory note which he claims Heitler executed.

ONE MAGISTRATE GETS ANOTHER TO DELAY CASE

Police Magistrate Theodore H. Wederle of Niles was scheduled to preside yesterday before Police Magistrate W. W. Ward of Morton Grove to explain what became of $2,000 which he had collected in fines from speeding motorists. Instead of appearing, Magistrate Wunderle called Magistrate Ward and explained he was busy considering the $3,000 and expected to appear with it next Thursday. The shortage in Wunderle's accounts was disclosed last winter when he disappeared for five days. While he was away Assistant State's Attorney Robert L. Donigan examined his books and learned that he kept no books.

LOSES JOB; HANGS SELF.

Paul Hoffner, 51 years old, hanged himself yesterday to a rafter in a garage back of his home at 6948 South Ashland avenue. He had been despondent, according to friends, since he lost his job several months ago.

BANK SITUATION IMPROVES; PLAN TO REOPEN MANY

Two Outlying Institutions Forced to Close.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Despite the closing of two more outlying banks yesterday, the wave of confidence and "runs" that spread upon small outlying banks during the first days of this week appeared to be subsiding further yesterday. Officials of both the big downtown and outlying institutions reported a generally calmer situation in various neighborhoods.

At the same time, officials of several banks that have suspended announced plans for reorganizations. But varying periods of time may be required to effect reorganizations and some banks will be liquidated, hope was expressed last night by leading bankers that a considerable percentage of the closed banks may be reopened.

Directors to Meet Today.

A special meeting of the directors of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and the National Bank of the Republic to arrange further details of their consolidation will be held today. Joseph E. Otis is scheduled to be elected vice chairman of the National Bank of the Republic and David R. Forgan will be made vice chairman of the Central Trust.

Letters were sent out yesterday to the stockholders of both banks outlining terms of the merger and calling for the deposit of stock. Physical consolidation of the two institutions will take place at an early date.

The committee to work out the final details was appointed. It consists of David R. Forgan, H. E. Otte, Henry P. Chandler, Otis, Philip R. Clarke and Rufus M. Dawes.

Two Banks Are Closed.

The two banks that closed yesterday were the Garfield-State bank, at 4801 West Madison street, and the Beverly Bank of Beverly Hills, 9443 South Ashland avenue. The directors of both banks requested State Auditor Oscar Nelson to take charge of their affairs.

The State Bank of Beverly Hills has no connection and should not be confused with the Beverly State Savings bank, 103d and Loomis streets.

The Garfield State bank had deposits of $7,000,000 on March 25, the date of the last official statement, while the State Bank of Beverly Hills had deposits around $900,000. Mr. Nelson said that deposits of both banks probably have been considerably reduced by recent withdrawals. The Garfield State bank had capital of $400,000 and surplus of $400,000, while the Beverly institution had capital of $100,000 and surplus of $25,000.

Explains Bank Closing.

The closing of the Garfield State bank was explained by Frank P. Hill, chairman of the executive committee, in the following statement:

"Whereas the unprecedented public excitement and suspicion and the closing of banks, several in the neighborhood of this bank, within the last few days has created a condition which renders it almost impossible to liquidate the assets of the bank fast enough to meet the demands upon it, and whereas the exacting of a sixty day notice from savings depositors, while perfectly legal, is unfair and opposed to give a commercial depositor preference over a savings depositor, and inasmuch as this bank is perfectly solvent, we believe that it is for the best interest of the depositors and patrons of the bank generally that the bank be temporarily closed until this public hysteria has subsided and reorganization effected."

Other Banks Take Action.

Plans for reorganizations of the West Town State bank, Sheridan Trust and Savings bank, Northwestern Trust and Savings bank, Washington Park National bank, and South Shore Bank and Trust company were under consideration yesterday. George F. Lelbrandt, president of the Lincoln State bank, asserted that bank is in sound position and assured of reopening.

Assistant F. E. Lackowski of the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank said that bank would be reopened shortly, although the actual date cannot be set yet.

Plans for the reorganization of the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank are being considered by a committee of business men named at a meeting of depositors Wednesday night. This committee announced last night that it hopes to announce plans in the near future. It consists of V. J. Curto, S. D. Herbison, S. Hayden, W. M. Dewey, E. W. Miles, and Loren Miller, and is being assisted by Edwin L. Reed.

Plans for Cheltenham.

President Floyd M. Phillips said the Cheltenham Trust and Savings bank either will reopen or be merged with another bank in the community. Directors of the Sheridan Trust and Savings and the Italian Trust and Savings banks said reorganizations were being considered, but their ultimate success could not be judged at this present time. Officials of the Washington Park National reported further progress in their reorganization plans.

The transfer of additional millions of dollars in cash from the big downtown banks and verbal reassurances to uneasy depositors proved sufficient to check "runs" on several banks, while the steady meeting of obligations at other institutions served to break their "runs."

At the Lawndale National bank Mayor Cermak explained to a crowd bent on withdrawing their deposits that the bank was sound and their money safe. The crowd cheered the mayor and most of them dispersed, while others remained to redeposit money just withdrawn.

Letter Sent to Depositors.

The National Bank of Woodlawn sent out a letter to depositors asserting that its assets are sound and far in excess of deposits. President Fred M. Lorish of this institution, and C. W. Hoff, president of the University State bank, said their banks were prepared to pay off every depositor in full, if necessary.

Business among the dig downtown banks was again about at normal proportions yesterday. There were smaller crowds in the First National-First Union Trust quarters, both because the rush of Foreman-State banks' depositors had been taken care of and because the throng of "sightseers" that was in evidence on previous days had become satisfied. Deposits continued to outrun withdrawals and combined deposits of the consolidated banks were larger last night than the aggregate of the individual institutions last Saturday.

$87,000,000 FURNISHED

Both the great strength of Chicago's big banks and the support given by the Chicago federal reserve bank in aiding the banking situation were revealed last night. The weekly statement of the reserve bank showed that it had furnished more than $87,000,000 of additional cash to its member banks in Chicago and much of this vast sum was transferred to the outlying banks.

But such is the strength of the Chicago loop banks that they were able to borrow the cash on their own secondary reserves, which consist largely of government securities and prime bonds. It was not necessary for them to borrow from the reserve bank to any extent by rediscounting their own loans. In fact, such rediscounts increased only $4,000,000 and even now total only $5,000,000.

Moreover, despite the greatest demand for cash in Chicago's financial history, the Chicago reserve bank maintained about the strongest position of its career. Its total reserves increased more than $87,000,000 and now aggregate $596,664,000. The bank's ratio of reserves to liabilities now stands at 88.7 per cent, compared with 87.8 per cent a wek ago.

STORMS TAKE 4 LIVES IN SOUTHWEST; SOME PROPERTY DAMAGE

Kansas City, Mo., June 11.—(AP)—Tornado winds, lightning and driving rains in the southwest and Rocky mountain regions tonight had brought death to at least four persons, injury to five, and caused a large but unestimated property damage.

Two tornadoes visited the southwest tonight. At Fort Gibson, Okla., Mamie Landrum, 16, was killed by a twister that demolished her home, injured her mother, Mrs. Donie McGowan, and crashed through numerous roofs.

A seven room farm house was wrecked near Rochelle, Tex., injuring four persons, one seriously. Mrs. Jack Whitehead was hurt internally.

Lightning accounted for three deaths. Paul Wells, 24, a farmer, was killed near Fort Collins, Colo. Pete Urrity, 22, a sheep herder, was struck by a bolt near Buffalo, Wyo. Leonard Simmons, 13, of Ponca City, was the victim of electrical storms in central and northern Oklahoma.

Scattered rains were reported in the southwest, some driven before heavy winds, damaging crops.

George Kleine, a Pioneer Film Producer, Is Dead

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Funeral services for George Kleine, 67, one of the early producers of motion pictures, were held today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Helen K. Bold, where he died on Monday after a year's illness. Burial took place in Brooklyn. Many New Yorkers remember the success of the Italian picture, "Quo Vadis," which Mr. Kleine brought to the United States in 1913. Mr. Kleine's interest in the possibilities of motion pictures began in 1896, when he owned an optician's store in Chicago.

BILL TO CONTINUE CHICAGO ZOO IS PASSED IN HOUSE

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Representative Emmett McGrath [Dem., Brookfield] today engineered his bill to continue the tax levy for the Chicago Zoölogical gardens through the house. The bill gives the forest preserve district the right to levy a tax annually, not to exceed three-twentieths of one mill on the dollar, until Dec. 1, 1934, for the construction, maintenance, and care of the gardens.

YOUNG BRIDE HAS BROKER JAILED AS A BIGAMIST

San Francisco, Cal., June 11.—(AP)—Charges of bigamy were lodged here today against Thornton Lothrop Motley, 30, New York.

The warrant was sworn to by Mrs. Yvonne Corrine Poillon Motley, who resides at a fashionable apartment here, after she read in newspapers that another Mrs. Motley had sued for divorce in Cleveland.

Motley is widely known in financial circles here. He appeared here last September, coming from New York and Chicago.

Until about a week ago, Motley was employed by a Montgomery street brokerage house, when he suddenly resigned.

State Auditor Tells Process of Handling a Closed Bank

What happens when a state bank closes? How much will the depositors lose? When can they expect part or all of their money to be paid them? What is being done to protect their interests?

State Auditor Oscar Nelson undertook yesterday to answer these and similar questions. First he said he wanted those concerned to know that there is much to be salvaged and depositors' losses, if any, are not likely to be ultimately large.

The state auditor said there may be reorganizations that will permit of speedy reopenings of some banks on a strong basis, and in cases where banks are not reopened there will be liquidations conducted under conditions that should be reassuring to the creditors.

Procedure Is Outlined.

The procedure as outlined by State Auditor Nelson is as follows:

First an inventory is taken of the assets of a bank which has suspended payment.

Next the state auditor consults the directors of the bank on the prospects of a reorganization. The auditor decides on what basis the bank may be reopened with proper liquidation and on contributions from stockholders under their double liability. If sufficient new capital is raised the bank may resume.

If no reorganization is effected a receiver is appointed by the auditor in accordance with law. The receiver proceeds to liquidate—that is, to collect the bank's accounts and pay its debts. This is done under the supervision of the state auditor's office and the jurisdiction of a Circuit or Superior court judge. Every compromise on a debt owed the bank must be passed on by the court.

"It shouldn't be forgotten," said Auditor Nelson, "that we have a liquidation department, consisting of a corps of auditors and accountants, and we oversee every transaction."

As soon as sufficient money is available the receiver declares a dividend to the depositors. He declares other dividends whenever the assets of the banks are converted into additional cash.

Suit to Satisfy Creditors.

First, however, every depositor must file a claim with the receiver. Twelve weeks are allowed for the filing. An individual who owes the bank and has an equal or larger amount on deposit is entitled to a set-off—that is, he need not pay on his note. Public moneys are secured and must be given preference in payments.

After all claims are filed the creditors may file a suit in court if necessary to collect from the stockholders under their liability in twice the amount of their stock. The proceeds go to the receiver for equal distribution among the creditors. The costs were discussed by Mr. Nelson as follows:

"Fees of the receivers and attorneys are approved by the auditor and allowed by the courts. We use every effort to economize. We go to court only with such accounts as make it absolutely necessary.

"We employ receivers on salary in many banks. We can't always do this in the larger ones because the amount of work cannot be estimated. We employ only such persons as can give their entire time and attention to the work. They make periodical reports of their progress to the state auditor's office."

NEW WARD MAP ASSURED AS 38 ALDERMEN AGREE

Expect Four More Votes After Minor Changes.

Passage of the ordinance redistricting Chicago's fifty wards to equalize their populations is assured by the "practical agreement" of thirty-eight of the sitting aldermen, Ald. James B. Bowler [25th] announced yesterday. His redistricting committee will present its draft of the new ward lines to the council on June 24, he said.

ALD. BOWLER.

"Thirty-eight aldermen have practically agreed to the new boundaries set for their wards," Bowler said. "Only very minor differences stand in the way of agreement by four more. We still face serious difficulties in the cases of the eight other aldermen, however, six of whom find their wards wiped out and reconstituted in other parts of the city by shifting population."

Foes Short Six Votes.

However, that will not block the remapping plan, Ald. Bowler explained. Fourteen aldermen are necessary to do that. That number of ward representatives would have the power to present a substitute plan and force a referendum on the two proposals.

While enough votes are assured to force the measure through the council, the subcommittee is still working to iron out all the differences possible, Ald. Bowler added.

Ald. Bowler has promised not to disclose any of the proposed new ward boundaries until the measure is presented to the council, but he said the subcommittee had worked out a map under which no ward has more than 66,000 population. The average population per ward, under the 1930 federal census, was 67,523.

Wards More Rectangular.

"The wards generally are more rectangular, with fewer gerrymanders, than the fifty wards drawn up after the 1920 census," Bowler said.

In drawing the new map the subcommittee was provided with federal census figures for every block in the city. These were marked on a larger map and made the basis of the redistricting.

Of the six wards which under the new plan will include the homes of two sitting aldermen, he said, four are on the west and northwest sides, and one each on the north and south sides.

County Board to Tighten Roadhouse License Rules

More rigid enforcement of the laws pertaining to the licensing of roadhouses in the county was recommended to the county board yesterday by a subcommittee headed by Commissioner Homer J. Byrd. Upon the motion of Commissioner George A. Miller of Oak Park a resolution was adopted to refer all applications for licenses to the sheriff and state's attorney's office for information concerning the character of the applicant and the reputation of the place to be operated.

STATE TO START WORK ON FIVE GRADE DIVIDES

State Highway Engineer Sheets announced yesterday that contracts will be awarded this month for the construction of five highway grade separations in the metropolitan area. One of these will break the bottle neck in Elmhurst at the intersection of Lake street and North avenue. The others are:

Roosevelt road, near Glen Ellyn, and route 53, a new north and south road.

Odgen avenue and route 53.

Odgen avenue, in Hinsdale, and route 54, another new north and south road.

Lake street and route 54 in Elmhurst.

The state recently awarded a contract for a grade separation at Joliet road and route 54. It has three of these structures under construction, at North avenue and Mannheim road, at Northwest highway and Dundee road, and at Archer and 96th avenues, this being part of the $1,250,000 span over the Des Plaines river valley to connect Mannheim road with 96th avenue and 79th street.

"With money and man power available and with favorable weather, we are making good progress toward the completion of the $19,000,000 construction program in the metropolitan area," said Mr. Sheets. "The state will spend approximately $12,000,000 in Chicagoland this year."

MOTOR DRIVER BILL SURVIVES LICENSE FEE FIGHT IN HOUSE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.] The motor driver's license bill had tough going in the house this afternoon, but survived a motion to strike its enacting clause and eventually landed back in the judiciary committee for a "conference." Predictions tonight are that if it gets to third reading before adjournment, it will have accomplished most of its progress.

The main argument against it came from John Devine [Dem., Dixon]. "This is the fifth time I have seen this bill come into the house," said Devine. "It has been killed four times and should go down a fifth time. There is no demand for this law. It would create lots of easy jobs and permit the secretary of state to become a prosecuting and persecuting official. The motorists of Illinois already pay $30,000,000 in gas tax each year. Are you going to saddle something else upon them?"

The vote on the proposition of striking the enacting clause was 44 to 72 and the bill was sent back to the judiciary committee.

The house motor vehicle bill prescribing that "any person who operates a motor vehicle upon the public highways of this state in a wanton or reckless manner, showing an utter disregard for the safety of others, under circumstances likely to cause great bodily injury, and does thereby cause injury to another which does not result in death is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $1,000," is in the senate. An amendment by Senator Barbour putting back into it the "teeth'" in the shape of a jail sentence provision cut out of the house bill, was adopted today. The amended bill is now on third reading in the senate.

PERU NIPS REBEL PLOT; DECREES STATE OF SIEGE

LIMA, Peru, June 11.—(AP)—The provisional government of President David Samanez Ocampo, sworn in exactly three months ago after a series of revolutions in Peru, announced today it had put down a plot to overthrow the junta. The government decreed the reëstablishment of a state of siege throughout the country.

A government bulletin announced the arrest of 22 conspirators in a garage in Callao and 23 of their colleagues in Lima. The statement added that the junta authorities were acquainted with the revoltuionary plans and had the situation under control.

CHICAGO STUDENT AT U. OF ILLINOIS KILLS HIMSELF

Found Shot to Death in North Side Home.

Clarence Hawkinson, 20 years old, a student at the University of Illinois, shot and killed himself last night in his home at 1445 Edgewater avenue less than twenty-four hours after he had returned from Champaign for the summer.

An investigation by Sergt. Frank Gill convinced the Summerdale police that the youth had committed suicide. He was found in bed, a revolver clutched in his right hand. The bullet had entered his right temple and emerged from the left temple. Powder burns on the pillow showed that the shot had been muffled.

Driven Home by Parents.

Hawkinson had finished his second year in the college of engineering at the university on Wednesday. That night his parents, Eric Hawkinson, an engineer, and Anna, drove to Urbana to bring him home. They arrived in Chicago early yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon Hawkinson and two cousins went shopping. After his return, about 4 o'clock, Hawkinson told his mother he felt tired. He went to his bedroom to rest. At 7 o'clock Mrs. Hawkinson, on calling him for dinner, discovered him dead.

Parents Blame Overstudy.

A nervous breakdown, the result of overstudy, was suggested by Hawkinson's parents as the only possible motive for his act. He told them, they said, that he had been forced to exert himself to maintain his scholastic record. The youth had no love affairs nor other problems so far as the family knew.

He was a captain in the university R. O. T. C., and had been awarded a commission to attend the students' training camp at Fort Sheridan this summer.

Cambon, 86, Former French Envoy to U. S., Stricken

PARIS, June 11.—(AP)—Jules Cambon, who served as an intermediary between Spain and the United States in 1898 while French ambassador to Washington, was reported today to be suffering from an "acute gastric attack accentuated by the heat." Friends of the 86 year old diplomat were alarmed over his condition despite the announcement that the illness was not grave.

EXPLOSION FATAL TO BOY.

Canton, Ill., June 11.—(AP)—Lawrence Melwin, 8 year old Marietta boy who was badly burned in an explosion at his home yesterday, died today. His brother, Ivan, 6, is in a critical condition.

HIS WEIGHT WAS 40 TONS WHEN HE HAD HIS HEALTH

New Haven, Conn., June 11.—(AP)—Brontosaurus, known as the "Thunder Saurian," a dinosaur nearly 70 feet long and 16 feet high, today took its place among the public exhibits at the Peabody museum of Yale university.

When alive, Brontosaurus, whose age is estimated at 120,000,000 years, is believed to have weighed between 37 and 40 tons. The skeleton of this reptile, one of the largest the world has ever seen, weighs 13,000 pounds.

The Yale specimen was discovered in 1881 by William H. Reed in Wyoming.

CERMAK SIGNS STICKER LAW FOR AUTO TAGS

Mayor Cermak yesterday signed the ordinance passed by the city council on Wednesday providing additional stickers as well as plates with new vehicle licenses. The determination of the size and color of the stickers is up to the finance committee. It is expected that the stickers can be mailed to motorists by July 15. The stickers will be mailed free and the absence of one will indicate that the driver, if his car bears a number, obtained it illegally. Next year only the stickers, which are theft proof, will be used for vehicle tags.

LABOR RULE NEAR FALL IN BRITAIN; LIBERALS BOLT

Land-Tax Debate Will Decide Fate.

(Copyright: 1931: By the Associated Press.)

LONDON, June 11.—A great Brit- ish political crisis loomed steadily nearer tonight with the threat of a split between Laborites and Liberals which may determine the fate of the MacDonald government in next week's debate on the controversial land tax bill.

David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, in a speech at Edinburgh today set forth the critical nature of a situa- tion that, although confused in detail, is simple in its main outlines and is increasingly threatening to the Mac- Donald government.

All Up to Lloyd George.

The contention is over the govern- ment's finance bill, implementing Philip Snowden's budget, with its pro- vision two years hence for a tax of a penny a pound on the capital value of land. The proposal was first wel- comed in principle by Lloyd George and the majority of his Liberal lead- ers, but they decided to move for an amendment under which certain sec- tions of land taxpayers should have compensatory relief in the form of in- come tax reduction. This amend- ment will be debated in the house of commons Tuesday.

Lloyd George made it clear today he stands firmly by the "substance" of the amendment, and if he carries the bulk of Liberals with him, as now seems more than likely, the govern- ment will be defeated Tuesday night.

The feeling among political observ- ers was that such a defeat would mean the dissolution of parliament and a general election. This would not entail the resignation of the gov- ernment, for resignation would imply Prime Minister MacDonald's advising King George to ask Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, to form an alter- native government.

What Premier May Recommend.

The recommendation that Mr. Mac- Donald would be most likely to make to the king, it is believed in the best informed circles, would be for a dis- solution of parliament and a new elec- tion while Labor remained technically in office pending the verdict of the voters.

Liberals and laborites alike are making every effort to avert a crisis. The belief is that Mr. MacDonald would go far to meet the views of Lloyd George, but is prevented by Mr. Snowden, who is unwilling to make the slightest concession. A pos- sible way out would be for the prime minister to throw his chancellor of the exchequer overboard, but this is believed to be most unlikely.

In his Edinburgh speech Lloyd George pleaded with the government to accept the amendment "in sub- stance—I am not talking about the form."

INHERITANCE TAX LAW REFORM TO AID POOR ASKED BY LABOR CHIEF

Nashville, Tenn., June 11.—(AP)— Changes in the inheritance laws of the nation "so that huge fortunes may be so taxed as to bring about a dis- tribution of these huge fortunes through the instrumentality of the law" were proposed in an address to the Tennessee general assembly today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

"We are not criticizing those who have accumulated money," he said. "We are not denouncing the wealthy. This is a political and an economical problem. We must face the issue.

"There must be a more economical division of the wealth of the nation, or the more favored will continue to pile up huge fortunes that may be- come a menace to our nation.

"Inheritance tax legislation should be supplemented by provisions prohibi- iting wealthy people from making gifts of wealth before death in order to escape inheritance taxes."

Mr. Green said he would solve the present unemployment situation by turning loose "the buying power of the working people."

PLUNGES FROM WINDOW OF LOOP HOTEL AND LIVES

St. Louis Banker Falls; Wife Rushes Here.

Bruce Ramsey, 50 years old, as- sistant vice president of the First National bank of St. Louis, fell from his room on the fifth floor of the Congress hotel to a court three stories below yesterday morning. He was found unconscious and taken to the Illinois Central hospital. His condition was reported to be critical.

Hotel officials notified his wife at St. Louis, who chartered a plane and ar- rived at his bedside in the afternoon. She characterized the incident as an unfortunate accident, declaring her husband's health and financial affairs to be in excellent condition. Their home life was happy, she said. Ram- sey did not regain consciousness dur- ing her visit.

Regular Guest at Hotel.

Ramsey arrived at the hotel on Wednesday morning. He had stopped at the hotel monthly for several years. Employes reported he appeared to be in excellent spirits. At 4 o'clock yesterday morning guests in adjoining court rooms were awakened by the noise of the fall. They notified Ray Reilly, night manager, who found Ramsey.

Reilly notified Mrs. Ramsey and a brother, Frank Ramsey, 1407 Jarvis avenue. Mrs. Ramsey joined the brother at the hospital. Police said they had received no report of the accident.

Ramsey fell from the bathroom win- dow adjoining his room. John Burke, manager of the hotel, said he believed Ramsey became confused as he awoke during the night, walked to the bathroom and fell through the window as he groped in the dark.

M. A. Holderness, vice president of the bank, and Ramsey's immediate superior, said Ramsey was to have returned to St. Louis today. Ramsey, who had been employed by the bank 12 years, was a solicitor of new ac- counts.

'GHOST SCHOOLS' DUE FOR AIRING IN MISSISSIPPI

Ex-State Official Accused of $80,000 Fraud.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Jackson, Miss., June 11.—[Special.]—The story of Mississippi's "ghost schools" and the embezzlement of $80,000 from the Rosenwald fund and the general education board is to be aired in the county court here next November, when one Bura Hilbun, formerly of the state department of education, goes to trial. Next to the $80,000 paving scandal, in which a mysterious Jack C. Wilson of Chicago is involved and in which disbarment is asked against noted lawyers, this school fund accusation is the current political sensation. Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo bobs up in both of them in a most elusive manner, for Hilbun was a "Bilbo man" and must be defended.

JULIUS ROSENWALD.

The "ghost schools" were born in the shadows of the old Mississippi statehouse, a dusty, haunted structure, where move the shadows of Jackson and Clay and Jefferson Davis, where the black and tan legislature and the carpetbaggers were driven out and a new civilization established, flowering into some weeds as well as much of beauty.

Enters Mr. Rosenwald.

Now enters the Chicago philanthropist, Julius Rosenwald, with his $35,000,000 fund dedicated to the "well being of mankind." In searching for wise ways in which to invest this money in humanity's future he found Mississippi and other southern states struggling with the problem of financing an educational problem beyond their means. He entered this field, with headquarters at Nashville, establishing a fund for building schools for Negro children in the rural district.

There are now more than four thousand Rosenwald schools, a number of them with separate buildings for shops and teachers' homes, in the 14 states of the south. There are more than eleven thousand teachers in these model little schools that dot the hills and valleys in almost every county, giving elementary instruction in the three R's, in home making, and in farming and medical industries to 500,000 Negro children. The investment represented is $30,000,000, of which the Negroes have given $4,000,000, the whites by gift $1,000,000, $12,000,000 by taxation, and about three and a third million by Mr. Rosenwald.

How System Worked.

The system under which these gifts is made, and how it worked out in this instance, is shown in the report of the special investigating committee of the house of representatives, made Jan. 30, 1930, and upon which indictments subsequently were returned. This follows in part:

"Upon forms provided by the Nashville offices in the Rosenwald fund, application would be made for a donation in a specific amount to aid in the erection of a specific school, the application containing considerable detail as to the type of school, cost of construction, amount of local contribution, etc. This application would be approved by the managers of the fund later. Also on form provided for that purpose, Mr. Hilbun would, using the signature of W. F. Bond, superintendent of education, and his own individual signature, report to the Nashville Rosenwald office that the school had been completed, accompanying the report with a 'final inspection report' of the school, showing its construction, size, height, color of paint, and the date the same had been inspected.

Schools Never Built.

"Upon receipt of this report the sum of money agreed upon would be forwarded forthwith in the form of a draft, payable to the Mississippi state department of education. These drafts, when received, were deposited to an account styled Rosenwald fund, by W. F. Bond, superintendent. The investigation by the auditors and the testimony taken before the committee show that this fund was handled and checked against solely by Mr. Hilbun, Mr. Bond's name being signed by Mr. Hilbun without any procuration.

"Some 38 or 40 report were forwarded to the Rosenwald office in Nashville, with final inspection reports thereon, of schools which in truth and in fact, were never constructed and are nonexistent. As will be seen from the auditor's report the total amount of the embezzlement from the Rosenwald fund fixed at $44,892."

Other embezzlements charged to Hilbun, from the general education board fund, the Negro journal fund, flood relief and other funds, bring the total to $83,289. Over a period of 10 years the committee found that Hilbun had deposited to his account in various banks, including his salary and travel allowances, $199,844.

In 1927 Hilbun and Gov. Bilbo took a trip to Europe together, the Governor it is said, on funds donated by admirers.

When the case was taken to court the new dean of the state law school, Stone Deauvors, who had been appointed by Gov. Bilbo in his political shakeup of educational institutions, came to the defense of Hilbun. A mistrial was declared after the jury reported it stood 11 to 1 for conviction. The case is on the calendar for a new trial this fall.

"SUPPRESSED" PAPER "BOOTLEGGED" AT 25 CENTS BY NEWSBOYS

Minneapolis, Minn., June 11.—[Special.]—Despite police suppression of the Public Press and denial of a restraining order to prevent seizure of the newspaper on the streets, a score of Minneapolis newsboys tonight were "bootlegging" copies of the paper at twenty-five cents a copy.

Judge Arthur W. Selover yesterday denied the appeal of Arthur Kasherman, editor of the Public Press, for an injunction to restrain the police from seizing his paper. The appeal grew out of the confiscation of approximately 30,000 copies two days before the primary election in May.

Kasherman's paper has as its primary object an exposé of vice conditions in Minneapolis.

296 WEST POINT CADETS AWARDED COMMISSIONS

West Point, N. Y., June 11.—[Special.]—At the graduation exercises of the United States Military academy here today 296 cadets became second lieutenants of the regular army and were welcomed by Frederick H. Payne, assistant secretary of war. He told them: "You will assist in developing a national defense system that, if need be, will stand all tests, even to the ultimate test of war."

Although the function of the army under our national policy is to preserve peace, Mr. Payne said, it must be recognized that modern warfare is a comprehensive undertaking which now requires a training far beyond professional soldiering, because it utilizes the efforts of a whole nation and enrolls its citizens.

Cadet Kenneth Adelbert McCrimmon, who headed the class, had received 2,828 points out of a possible 2,970. Among the first twenty graduates were two Filipinos, Rufo Gainat Romero and Jaime Velasquez y Camacho.

RECOVERING FROM POISON.

Mrs. Elizabeth Burns, 30 years old, wife of an advertising man and a resident of the McCormick hotel, last night was recovering from the effects of poison which she swallowed yesterday morning after a quarrel with her husband, T. K. Burns, in his office at 105 West Monroe street.

POWER INDUSTRY ACTS TO INSURE WORKERS' JOBS

Campaign Is Launched at Convention.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 11.—[Special.]—An organized movement to insure stability of employment for several hundred thousand workers in the power industry was launched today at the convention of the National Electric Light association.

Following a lengthy discussion of methods of promoting a return of prosperity and combating periodic unemployment, W. Alton Jones of New York, president of the association, appointed a committee of leaders in the industry to study the problem, and expressed confidence that a system would be worked out which might apply to all lines of business. His action followed an address by Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company.

Have Courage, Edison Tells Them.

Amid their deliberations the delegates paused to pay tribute to the man who had made the industry possible.

Thomas A. Edison was compared by Mr. Jones to Prometheus as "one of the great benefactors of the human race whose genius laid the foundations of this business and whose character and example continue to be its inspiration and example."

Responding from his laboratory in Fort Myers, Fla., with a brief speech which was amplified in the convention hall, Mr. Edison expressed his confidence in the return of prosperity.

"My message to you is to be courageous," he said. "I have lived a long time, I have seen history repeat itself again and again. I have seen many depressions in business. Always America has come out stronger and more prosperous. Be as brave as your fathers were before you, have faith—go forward."

Discusses Workers' Insurance.

Discussing the question of workers' insurance, Mr. Swope said that some progress had been made in the electrical field and other industries to provide life and old age insurance, but that very little had been done in this country to assure steady employment.

"There has been so much consideration given to this latter matter lately however," he added, "that unless industry finds a way the government may feel itself compelled by public opinion to endeavor to solve the problem. The question becomes largely the responsibility of management, but even in this case the cooperation of the employé should be enlisted so that his interest may be aroused and he may be fully cognizant of the significance of the solution of this problem.

"We must give consideration to what has been done in other countries and in this country by various states and individual companies. We must enlist the best thought of the industry in the adoption and extension of these plans on a more comprehensive basis, so that they will meet the changing requirements of the industry and will free the minds of workers from these human worries, and the system should be sufficiently elastic to cover the transfer of employés from one company to another in the association without losing the rights and benefits they have acquired."

STATES TO SCAN U. S. INCOME TAX RETURNS UNDER HOOVER ORDER

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Opening of individual federal income tax returns to the inspection of officials of states which have income laws was authorized by President Hoover in an executive order made public at the treasury department today.

Regulations for the administration of the new order and a further provision that beneficiaries under a will might inspect federal returns, were issued over the signature of Secretary Mellon.

This is the first time in the history of the income tax system that state officials have been authorized to examine federal returns, although the law has provided for some years that they may examine federal corporation tax returns. Discretion was left to the President to permit inspecting of individual returns.

Twelve or more states, including New York, have income tax laws. They have been urging for several months the action taken today. Treasury officials said that after consideration of the situation it was decided they should have the privileges as a means of easier and more efficient enforcement of their laws.

Written applications signed by the governor of the state are necessary to obtain the privilege of inspection.

Court Reverses Conviction of Son of Bishop Cannon

Los Angeles, Cal., June 11.—(AP)—The appellate department of the Superior court reversed today the conviction of Richard M. Cannon, son of Bishop James Cannon Jr., on a charge of violation of the state wage law. The case, tried in a justice of the peace court in Pasadena in February, involved a wage claim of $33.30 by a teacher of the El Monte Military academy. The appellate department said the elements of the alleged offense were not sufficiently proved.

HUNT SOURCE OF POISON IN DEATH OF RADIO WORKER

A chemical analysis of the vital organs of Mrs. Josephine Keim, 35 years old, 1614 South Michigan avenue, who died yesterday in St. Luke's hospital, of what was believed to be industrial poisoning, was ordered last night by Coroner Herman N. Bundesen. According to the coroner's office, Mrs. Keim was employed in the manufacture of radio tubes and investigation has revealed that four other women employés in a factory who are ill have shown the same symptoms as did Mrs. Keim.

Mrs. Keim became ill six months ago, the records show. The symptoms were apparently those of jaundice. After treatment she recovered and returned to work, but was compelled to enter the hospital again on June 2.

Dr. Alice Hamilton, a specialist in the treatment of obscure industrial poisoning cases, has been asked by Dr. Bundesen to attend the inquest today at 10236 Ewing avenue.

GET RICH QUICK VISIONS PUT 3 IN GARY CELLS

A Bookkeeper, 54, 'Plots' All Sorts of Things.

The many years Ferdinand K. Daum, 54 years old, had been a respectable bookkeeper. Lately, sitting on his high stool in the packing plant of Tittle Bros. in Gary, he has been working up plots to make a lot of money without work.

He had discussed in the last month a number of these plans. His confidants were James Clayton, 28 years old, and Ted Hartman, 30 years old, also residents of Gary. As a result all three are under arrest in Gary, charged with conspiracy to commit a crime, although the Gary police believe that Daum is only a dreamer.

A Fertile Imagination.

The plots he envisioned ranged from robbery with a gun through counterfeiting the United States currency and printing and marketing fake stock certificates to the kidnaping of at least one, and possibly two, wealthy Gary business men. None of them got much past the stage of imaginative thinking, in the opinion of the police.

When secret service men from Chicago, acting on a report that Daum was a counterfeiter, raided his room at a Washington hotel in Gary, they found a few black masks like those James used to wear, a pistol, a blackjack of crude construction, and some fake certificates for stock. They seized Daum and Clayton.

Clayton Does Some Explaining.

Clayton explained about the stock certificates and the counterfeiting plan. He said that he had known Daum since Jan. 1 and that about the middle of May the latter suggested that if he had a good engraver he saw no reason why they couldn't make some easy money.

So Clayton, at Daum's suggestion, came to Chicago and got samples of an engraver's work. But Clayton cooled a little when he was told the next step was to get the engraver to manufacture currency, and that plan was dropped a week ago.

The next thing suggested was that the engraver make up some stock certificates. Daum's idea was to take them to some trustful brokers, put them up as collateral and buy some good stocks in their stead. His enthusiasm for that plot weakened when some one told him the brokers had not been trustful.

Daum Has Another Idea.

Then bookkeeper Daum, eating in a cafeteria a fiery, suggested to Hartman, an acquaintance manager, that he go to the home of Joseph Tittle, head of the Tittle Bros. Packing company, and suggest to him that he would be shot unless he sent his bookkeeper—Daum—$1,400 and bail him out of an Hessing. Whereupon Ex-Warehouseman Hartman borrowed a dollar and went away.

Meanwhile Clayton called Mr. Tittle and J. J. Kelly, 123 West 43d street, Gary, and told them that he had heard three men in a restaurant plotting to kidnap them and make them pay ransom. As nearly as the Gary police can discover, Clayton was the third man, although they admit he told them last week about this little plot.

Released by U. S. Agents.

To Thomas J. Callaghan, chief of the secret service men in Chicago, Daum admitted that he wanted once to be a conuterfeiter, but he was given to the Gary authorities when the secret service department decided that thinking about printing money was not dangerous. When Daum was asked about the masks and weapons found in his room he explained:

"I got the masks for Halloween last fall. I bought the pistol and made the blackjack because I thought—perhaps I only imagined—that some day I would take up a life of crime."

Ex-Official Wears Formal Dress to Answer Charge

John C. Popovici, former Rumanian vice consul in Chicago and Cleveland, appeared before Judge Francis Borelli yesterday in the South State street court in formal morning attire to answer the charges of Mrs. Mary Moian, who says that he defrauded her of $7,000. GERMAN RIOTS SPREAD; POLICE FIRE ON REDS

Armored Cars Patrol Berlin After Clash.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 11.—Riots, apparently flamed by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's emergency tax decrees, again dotted Germany today.

The worst disorders occurred in Berlin, where armored cars tonight were patroling the streets as the result of an attack on the police by a communist mob, which had massed in front of the sportpalast. Both sides fired shots when the street in front of the building became a maelstrom of fighting humanity.

Many skulls were battered by the police and fifty of the rioters were arrested. The attack on the police was planned earlier in the day when 12,000 communists assembled at a mass-meeting. It was feared they would march on the government offices and all communists, including Ernst Thaelmann, member of the reichstag, were searched for weapons upon entering the hall.

In Kassel rioting was renewed today. Police and a communist mob battled it out with guns for more than an hour in the market place. A 30 year old man was found dead in a flat, having been killed by a stray bullet during the mêlée.

Five persons were wounded in Hamburg by shots fired at rioters by police after a communist massmeeting attended by 10,000. In Bremen Reds attacked police with clubs and stones after the officers had attempted to halt a street fight between communists and Fascists.

While the rioting was at its height in the capital, Chancellor Bruening, at a conference of leaders of political parties, declared that during the next few weeks "we must concentrate on the preparation of action for the revision of war reparations payments.

Threatens to Resign.

He flatly threatened to resign his post if his political enemies insisted on convoking the reichstag now in summer recess, for next week "because parliamentary rows only hinder the real work which must be done."

The chancellor promised the Socialists, the German People's party, the Economic party and his own Centrist party that his government would consider all concrete propositions for the correction and improvement of the emergency decrees, which raised a storm of indignation throughout Germany. However, he insists that the cuts in dole payments and salaries prescribed by the decrees are to be enforced in July to provide the government with the money it needs. The government is willing to make changes in October and then submit them to the reichstag, he added.

Bourse Suffers Setback.

The Berlin bourse suffered another black day with stocks recording the lowest level since the post-inflation era. Foreign withdrawals and short term loans were again in evidence today, and the loss of the reichsbank's gold and foreign currency holdings since the beginning of the month now totals $126,000,000.

Chancellor Bruening left for Neudeck, President Paul von Hindenburg's summer palace, tonight to report the results of his visit to England and Germany's political situation.

QUIZ FAITHFULL GIRL'S FAMILY IN DEATH PUZZLE

London Yields Clew to Murder Mystery.

impressions of persons and places covering a period of almost four years. The stepfather at first refused to let detectives have the diary, consenting only when threatened with a subpoena. Mr. Edwards admitted the entries in the little book indicated that several persons of wealth and prominence might have had a strong motive for wishing Starr dead. He said it provided some important "circumstantial evidence."

From other sources it was learned the diary was similar in some respects to the one left by Vivian Gordon, the vice witness who was slain several months ago "because she knew too much." Those who said they saw the diary declared there were only initials of the men with whom, at one time or another, Starr Faithfull seemingly was infatuated. The general tone of the diary was said to be one of periodic despondency, pointing more to a suicide theory than to one of murder. The words "passion" and "suicide" appeared frequently, it was said. It showed conclusively, one official said, that Miss Faithfull was fond of the seamier side of the city's night life.

The later investigation into the Faithfull death centered chiefly in a search for two men with whom she is believed to have kept an engagement on Thursday, June 4, the day before she vanished from her home down the street from Mayor Jimmy Walker's residence.

Two Men Are Described.

Mr. Edwards was said to have been provided with a description of these two men and, according to one report, with the name of one of them, supposedly by Francis Peabody Hamlin, son of a wealthy and socially prominent Boston broker. Miss Faithfull is said to have met the two men aboard the Franconia on May 29, when she overstayed at a party on the ship and was sent ashore in a tug.

In an effort to obtain further information about the ship party Mr. Edwards asked Cunard line officials in Liverpool to obtain statements from Capt. R. B. Irving, commander of the Franconia, and Dr. G. Jameson Carr, surgeon. He has not, however, enlisted the aid of Scotland Yard, the district attorney said.

The high point in the day's proceedings was the halting of the cremation of the slain girl in the little chapel at Fresh Pond crematory. Two men had advised the investigators they though they had seen Starr "under somewhat peculiar circumstances" on the day she disappeared.

Halt Cremation of Body.

Mr. Edwards immediately ordered the cremation halted until tomorrow at the earliest. If the witnesses—an elevator man and another employe of a midtown Manhattan office building—are correct in their suspicions, the prosecutor said, the names of hitherto unmentioned individuals, "including some women," might be brought into the already tangled case. The new witnesses will view the body tomorrow morning.

A youth in the uniform of a theater usher, accompanied by a Nassau county policeman, attempted to identify the dead girl as a patron of a Long Beach movie last Friday. Little importance was attached to his visit to the mortuary.

When the telephone call to halt the cremation was received the family of the dead girl, her father, Frank W. Wyman, Boston business man; her mother, step-father, and younger sister, were kneeling before the bier in the crematory chapel. They were the only mourners at the services and a dozen roses laid on the coffin by Mr. Wyman were the only flowers.

Father a Mystery Man.

While Mr. Edwards was busy on Long Island two facts which may have some bearing on the tragedy came to light in Manhattan. One had to do with Starr's last movements and the other concerned Mr. Faithfull, a more or less mysterious personage himself. Faithfull says he is a retired chemist. It is known that he once was connected with the Lactic Products company of Boston. The company's officers, including Faithfull, got tangled up with the federal courts over a mail order business, but Faithfull was acquitted. He now is a sort of salesman for a new type pneumatic mattress. His means of support for the last few years are somewhat of a mystery to the investigators.

It was learned that last fall while the rest of the family was in London Mr. Faithfull was assaulted near his apartment and taken into the office of Dr. Louis F. Sanman for treatment. Faithfull professed ignorance regarding the motive for the attack, except to suggest the possibility that some one might have been trying to steal from him a "valuable chemical formula." The other Manhattan clew came from I. Ginsberg, news dealer, who revealed that he had seen Miss Faithfull at 11:30 a. m. the day she disappeared. She stopped at his stand, bought a paper, and entered a subway station leading toward the Pennsylvania station, from which place it is assumed she took a train to Long Beach. Ginsberg was sure the girl was alone. He recognized her as a regular patron.

Try to Sell Antique Table.

It also was revealed the Faithfull family recently tried to raise money by disposing of a family heirloom to an antique dealer. The sideboard, made in 1800, is on exhibition at the shop and is priced at $1,000. It still awaits a purchaser. Alban Bauman, the antique dealer, said he saw furniture worth at least $10,000 when he went to the apartment to get the sideboard. There were Chippendale chests and Duncan Fyfe chairs which he would like to have, he said.

Nevertheless, the iceman and the milkman camped on the Faithfulls' stoop today trying to collect small bills.

The Faithfull home was besieged by reporters and photographers most of the day. Previously it had been wide open to members of the press, but today there was no welcome on the mat. The family spent a part of the morning being questioned by Mr. Edwards and his men. Afterwards the district attorney stressed the fact that the Faithfull family was in straitened circumstances. He attached great importance to "Tucker's" reticence to discuss her movements over the weekend and her failure to tell him that she had visited a pawn shop in the navy yard district of Brooklyn a week ago to obtain a loan on a leopard skin coat.

Sees His Former Wife.

Following the questioning, Mr. Wyman called at the home and saw his former wife for the first time in many years. Wyman and the Faithfulls had been reported at daggers points and Faithfull had said he would not permit him to "set foot in my house," but apparently a truce was declared this afternoon, for they started out together to Starr's funeral.

With Mrs. Faithfull in tears, Mr. Faithfull indignantly plucking at his thin gray cheeks, his step-daughter "Tucker" puffing on a cigaret, and Mr. Wyman glumly clutching a box of roses on his lap, the party rode away in a taxicab in the direction of Long Island.

An interesting sidelight on the mysterious case was provided when it was discovered in Boston that Miss Faithfull had been under observation for a brief time six years ago in the Channing sanitarium at Wellesley. Admitted under the name of Starr Wyman on a temporary order, she was discharged nine days afterward as "improved," according to the records of the department of mental diseases.

HUNT FRIEND IN LONDON.

LONDON, June 12.—[Friday].—(AP)—The London Daily Express this morning said that Scotland Yard started last night on a hunt for the "mystery man" whom Starr Faithfull was said to have sought in vain during her visit to London in 1928.

The Express said that when the girl stayed for two days at the Golden Cross hotel in London in 1928, she called 12 times a day at another hotel in an effort to meet this "mystery" friend, but failed.

She became very despondent, the paper said, and at last returned to America, leaving her baggage behind. In one of the trunks, the paper said, was found a diary "so frank that the manager of the hotel locked it up." The baggage, it said, was eventually sent to New York.

GORDON MURDER CASE JURY IS ORDERED LOCKED UP 3 WEEKS

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Lest there be tampering with the Gordon murder case jury, Justice Albert Cohn announced as the trial began in the Supreme court in the Bronx today that he would have the jurors locked up for the three weeks the case is expected to take.

Harry Stein and Samuel Greenberg are on trial, accused of having strangled to death Vivian Gordon, who was found dead in a gully in Van Cortlandt park late in February.

Before the selection of jurors started Samuel Leibowitz, attorney for Stein, challenged the entire jury panel of 150 talesmen. He said that it was "blue ribbon, hand picked," and that most of its members were from the West Bronx, where District Attorney Charles B. McLaughlin lives. He submitted his protest in writing, but it was overruled. Several days may be required to select the jury.

Toledo, O., June 11.—[Special.]—Officials of the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce tonight were endeavoring to learn the cause of an airplane crash here which resulted in the death of two Chicagoans and the injury of a third near the Transcontinental airport shortly before noon today.

The dead are Capt. Michael M. Rubner, 42, who operated an airplane taxi service at the Chicago airport, and Capt. C. F. Koschuh, 31, 64 West Schiller street, Chicago, attached to an Illinois National Guard infantry regiment. The injured man is Thomas F. White Jr., former naval flyer and an engineer for the Chris Paschen Construction company of Chicago. White is in St. Vincent's hospital here, suffering from a broken leg and several bruises.

Plane Chartered for Trip.

White had hired Rubner to fly him to Toledo on a business trip and the trio had taken off from the Chicago airport at 9 a. m. The flight was uneventful until the plane, a Lockheed-Vega cabin ship, circled the Transcontinental airport for a landing.

White said the plane had glided down to about 100 feet above the ground when it suddenly swerved crazily and spun about, nosing toward the ground. As the plane faltered, a wing buckled, White said, and Rubner shouted to his companions to hold on as he struggled with the controls. A moment later the plane crashed to earth and caught fire. Rubner was killed outright and was thrown back into the cabin by the impact. Koschuh was thrown through the side of the cabin. He died later in the hospital.

Falls on Farm Near Airport.

The plane fell on a farm half a mile from the Transcontinental field and was witnessed by airport attendants who hurried to the scene.

Rubner, a native of Silesia, was an old time Chicago flyer who for many years had "barnstormed" airplanes and operated a taxi service with his own planes. He served in the air corps during the war at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., and since the war had been active in the 108th Observation Squadron of the Illinois National Guard. He was a past commander of the Chicago Aviation Post of the American Legion.

Three Killed in South.

Mobile, Ala., June 11.—(AP)—Two Mobile attorneys and a Birmingham pilot were killed tonight as their plane crashed at the airport here. Vincent F. Kilborn, city attorney of Mobile; Edward J. Grove, attorney and member of the Alabama legislature, and Thomas J. Carter, the pilot, were the victims.

DRY AMENDMENT SEEN MENACE TO FREEDOM OF U. S.

Federal Official Thinks Nation's Ideals Wane.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The eighteenth amendment was cited as a menace to American freedom by William J. Cooper, United States commissioner of education, in an address delivered tonight before the George Washington university graduating class. Mr. Cooper deplored the present trend toward centralizing authority in Washington and asserted that apparently the major enemy of freedom today is the "racketeer."

Dr. Cooper said that apparently freedom is not so precious to the young men and women of today as it was to those who founded the republic. Our land of the free, he said, apparently has become the heritage of a generation "ready and willing to sweep away the constitutional guarantees of liberty."

He held up the eighteenth amendment as an example of this trend and asserted that "a danger to freedom is involved" every time the constitution is amended.

Saw Only Its Merits.

"Lately much has appeared in the press regarding the eighteenth amendment," Mr. Cooper said. "Obviously the proponents of that amendment were considering chiefly the merits of their cause. They did not foresee such other implications as a transfer of vast police powers to the United States government.

"The seventeenth amendment provides that the election shall be by the people directly. Those responsible for proposing and urging this amendment believed that it would prevent so-called 'boss control' of senators and would prevent wealthy men from spending money lavishly to secure the office. It was not foreseen, however, that popular election in a large and populous state placed a poor man at a disadvantage in a contest with a rich man and that an independent candidate could have no chance in opposition to a well organized political machine. And here again we did not foresee a possible effect on the attitude of senators in foreign relations.

"The net result has been that our foreign relations, which the founders hoped to remove from popular excitement, have been placed in the hands of the uninformed voters. For senators today must become 'rubber stamps' of the popular will.

Freedom Losing Its Essence?

"By constitutional amendment we may change the essential form of our government without giving the change the same careful consideration given by the great constitutional convention. We appear to be ready and willing to sweep away the 'constitutional guarantees' of liberty. Is 'freedom not as precious to members of this generation as it was to some of their ancestors?'"

The increasing centralization of power at Washington was deplored by Commissioner Cooper.

"The forces working for centralization are exceedingly subtle," he said, "hiding behind the most meritorious causes. Oftentimes they are abetted by national organizations whose purpose is the highest public good. And if the proponents of a measure are well enough organized in a congressman's district he is unlikely to be against it, even though he thinks it contrary to the constitution and his personal beliefs.

"But there should be better reasons than any heretofore advanced for unloading upon Washington responsibilities which have been throughout our history well discharged by the respective states."

DEMOCRATS IN HOUSE HELP G. O. P. TO PASS PAY INCREASE BILL

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Democratic assistance was required to put through a Republican bill in the house today.

The Tice measure to increase salaries of assistant attorney general's office in Chicago was called on third reading and was receiving few Republican votes until Minority Leader Igoe's name was reached on the roll call.

"After what happened yesterday this may seem funny," said Igoe, referring to the bitter inter-party fight that raged on the floor last night over congressional apportionment. "But you Republicans aren't voting for this bill and I only want to tell you that it merely gives living salaries to the men in Mr. Carlstrom's office in Chicago. Some of them don't get enough to keep body and soul together." After this "aye" votes began to roll in and the bill passed with a comfortable majority.

ADMINISTRATION AND DRY LAW BOTH ASSAILED

Des Moines, Ia., June 11.—(AP)—Ben J. Buttenweiser of New York today launched an attack against the national administration and prohibition in the opening general business session of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce convention.

Prohibition, Buttenweiser declared, "is a worse curse than the saloon it abolished and an obstacle in the way of economic recovery."

In 1930 it cost the American nation $951,000,000, he said, forty millions being spent "in an idle attempt to enforce this ill advised act," while the remainder constituted loss in excise revenue on beverages.

Besides its economic injuries, he continued, prohibition has created "a huge corrupt and lawless industry of racketeering," and has done "incalculable injury to the rising generation and to the entire national community by teaching disrespect for law and authority."

Buttenweiser, a member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., attacked the Hoover administration for its "attempted remedies" of the farm problem which were drawn up with "no searching consideration."

Business improvement, he continued, is heldup by "the archaic fetters of the Clayton and Sherman acts," and the present tariff, which, "far from improving our industrial situation, greatly impedes foreign trade and proves a real hindrance to industry and trade."

Wallace Pictures Millennium.

Henry A. Wallace Des Moines publisher, hailed the present business confusion as a "prelude to a world millennium," based on a three point program, which he outlined as follows: First, inflation and deflation must be avoided by agreements and understandings among financial leaders; second, cultivation of international good will, including lowering of American tariff walls and reduction of war debts; and third, improvement of "social inventiveness to equal the power of modern mechanical inventiveness."

PLEA FOR SAUSAGE MACHINE BLOCKS DIVORCE ACTION

The divorce proceedings of John and Bernice Kolecek were going smoothly before Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday in the Circuit court when they suddenly went to smash on a sausage machine.

John is a butcher. He had agreed to a divorce and was prepared to give his shop at 1359 Dickson street to his wife for the support of herself and their children, Raymond, 10 years old, and Rosemary, 4.

But at the last moment he objected to the granting of a decree to his wife, who charges him with cruelty and intoxication. He demanded that she give him a special sausage machine from the shop, on which he had turned out a product known throughout their neighborhood, so that he could set himself up as a sausage maker.

"Very well," said Attorney Harry X. Cole, representing the wife, "if he is going to act like that, we want an injunction to restrain him from going to bed every night in the same house with his wife and children with a meat cleaver under his pillow."

John protested that he meant no one any harm. Judge Trude set the hearing on the injunction for June 16.

ANGRY AT ITALY, CATHOLICS BURN OFFICIAL'S HOUSE

Riots Reported Raging as Peace Parleys Proceed.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 11.—[By telephone to Paris.]—Negotiations between the holy see and the Italian government over their conflict were at a lull today while alarming reports of violent incidents in the provinces of the south were received in Rome. The Vatican has not given publicity to these incidents beyond describing them as "grave" in order not to embarrass the pending "peace" negotiations.

But it was learned today that the house of a chief magistrate in a district near Naples was burned down by Catholic peasants, angry at the affronts to Pope Pius XI. and because their religious processions had been suppressed.

Censorship Hides Burnings.

No attempts to estimate the damage in the recent attacks on church property have yet been made by the Vatican, but it is understood it will reach several million lire. From the Alps to the heel of Italy there have been burnings and destruction of property, all knowledge of which is withheld by strictest censorship.

Foreign correspondents' dispatches have been delayed or suppressed and telegraph and cable companies in Italy have lost thousands of lire worth of business because of being forced to refund cash for telegrams held up by the censor.

It was reported here today that the American Knights of Columbus organization intends to withdraw from Italy as a result of the closing of their 250,000 playgrounds. The Knights of Columbus have been unofficially told that they could reopen, but they have refused to do so. It is understood that their Roman property may be removed to some other country, indicating the belief that while the present quarrel is certain to be patched up, it is just as certain to break out again.

Bishops Rule Catholic Action.

Progress is apparently being made in arriving at an agreement through negotiations. The Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ, announced tonight that the bishops would act directly in the management of the associations depending upon the Catholic Action, the latter no longer exercising direction through diocesan juntas made up of laymen.

It was announced that this step has been taken in view of recent disturbances; but this measure is regarded by Fascist authorities that the Vatican has acceded completely to the government's demands. The Fascist emphasize it was against these juntas of laymen, who were charged with attacking Fascism, that all the Fascist outbursts were directed.

Tonight the Osservatore Romano declared that those who broke into the church at Prisorno, near Rome, last week were black shirt militiamen. As the conflict continues, those who have seen the pope in audiences during the last few days, declare his health appears to have been affected by his worries and cares of the last two weeks' events. He looks pale and worn, they say. The Vatican tonight was reported to be preparing its reply to the Italian government's note.

Vera Cruz Limits Priests.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, June 11.—A new development in the strained relations between the Mexican government and the Catholic church in Mexico was revealed this morning in telegrams from Vera Cruz announcing that the legislature of that city has adopted a measure, decreasing that only one Catholic priest will be permitted to exercise religious services for every 100,000 inhabitants. The measure also provides for fines in the event additional priests officiate. The reports add that the legislature based its act on the belief that the activity of too many priests was causing a prejudicial influence on the public conscience.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES VOTE, 8 TO 2, FOR 50 MILLION BONDS

Cermak Appointee Assails Plan as Cheap Politics.

Hefferan. "It is most irregular, and besides my colleague, Mr. Carr, hasn't gotten back from lunch."

"This is of tremendous importance," replied Trustee Savage. "I am here and have been here right along. Others have had two weeks to speak on this resolution, and if they want to speak now, they should be here."

The roll call started on the Savage resolution. Its preamble says that the spending of $50,000,000 for new schools will aid the unemployed and relieve the business depression as well as provide 62,000 needed seats for school pupils. The resolution then directs the attorney for the school board to prepare a bill, which he is instructed to present to the legislature. This bill would empower the board of education to issue $50,000,000 in bonds for new schools.

"All the resolution does," said Trustee John A. English in casting his vote for the Savage plan, "is to ask the legislature for power to issue the bonds. We later can decide whether they shall be issued."

"The plan will not increase taxes," explained Trustee James A. Hemingway. "With the money now levied for new schools we can pay off the bonds and interest without any boost in taxes. If there are any who oppose the plan, they have an opportunity to protest to the legislature."

Carr Calls Plan Extravagant.

At this moment Trustee Carr arrived at the session.

"It occurs to me," he began, "that we have quite a job running the school buildings we now have. This $50,000,000 plan is a nice political gesture to labor and the contractors; but this time—under present conditions—should not be used for political play. I am very friendly to labor and contractors when they desire to act right, but this is a very extravagant scheme.

"In my opinion it is all hooey. It will not amount to anything. It is just cheap politics.

"It may be that the type of buildings and what we pay for them will be investigated further. I have heard it suggested that the grand jury should investigate."

Savage Makes Reply.

"I'm known as a Republican," said Trustee Savage, "and there are trustees here known as Democrats. The only politics I have noticed has come from the other side.

"We are criticized because we did not ask the city hall to send over its machine to investigate the board. The lady trustee a week ago favored asking the Cleveland Audit company to make a complete investigation. She told me so, in your presence, Mr. President.

"I was surprised when she appeared with a resolution asking the city hall to investigate us. That is where she got her resolution; she told me so.

"Let the city administration run the city hall. They have a big job, and will have all they can do to take care of it. Why should the city hall be dictating how we shall run the schools? If we make mistakes they will not be to blame."

Mrs. Hefferan Speaks.

"It is undignified for me to reply to such assertions," said Mrs. Hefferan. "I vote on principle, not according to politics. On the survey it is a question of veracity. I haven't the least iota of respect for the Cleveland audit report. If they turn in another report like the one we have received it will just be squandering more of the taxpayers' money. I vote for the children first, the teachers second, and for a policy of righteous education all the time."

The board recessed until Monday afternoon, when the payments of teachers with participation certificates is scheduled to be discussed. The plan is to deposit tax anticipation warrants in a trust, and have the trustee issue participation certificates as pay to the teachers and other employes.

During one of his speeches yesterday, Trustee Carr said: "So far as cash is concerned, the board is bankrupt."

A canvass of three banks yesterday brought the statement from each that it will not accept the participation certificates.

FRANCE ELECTS ALBERT LEBRUN HEAD OF SENATE

PARIS, June 11.—(AP)—Senator Albert Francois Lebrun was elected president of the senate today to succeed Paul Doumer, who becomes president of France Saturday. He won over Jules Jeaneny

Lebrun, who was Raymond Poincare's choice for the presidency at the recent election, is a mining engineer.

President Gaston Doumergue, whose term of office expires Saturday, is planning to take a long rest with his bride at their home at Tournefeuille, near Toulouse. His time will be divided among quiet strolls in the adjacent woods, reading books and listening to the radio. During his presidency M. Doumergue solved 15 cabinet crises and was one of the most popular French executives. He is the only president since the war to serve the full seven years of his term.

"I never smoked Camels before, but they're my brand now."

"That new Humidor Pack does make a big difference."

"I simply can't smoke stale, parched dry cigarettes any more."

"You actually can hear the difference."

That's the kind of conversation that's going on everywhere about Camels.

Wherever you turn you hear men and women talking about the big advantages of the new Humidor Pack.

And every day, thousands of smokers are turning to Camels simply because they have found that the Camel blend of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos protected by this germ-proof, moisture-proof, dust-proof air-seal actually gives them a superior cigarette.

If you haven't discovered these advantages, make this simple test for your own information.

First, take a fresh Camel from the Humidor Pack, light it and inhale its mild, fragrant smoke. Note how cool it is on your throat, how free from parch or bite or burn.

Next, light any other cigarette. As you draw in the smoke, note how brackish and flat it is, when compared with your factory-fresh Camel.

Evaporation that robs other cigarettes of their moisture cannot steal away the goodness of Camels. For the Humidor Pack keeps them always in factory-fresh condition.

After you have made this test, after you have discovered how much better Camels really are, then go back to your old brand—if you can.

RUSSIA GETS PAY IN GOLD, BUT PAYS IN CHEAP RUBLES

Soviets Plan to Issue New Currency.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, May 1.—[By Mail via Harbin, Manchuria.]—Persistent rumors are current that the soviet government intends to issue a new gold currency. Depreciation of the chervonetz as a standard, which superseded the post-war ruble after it fell to zero, is given as the reason.

The two-currency system exists in Russia. There are rubles for the natives and valuta for the foreigners. Valuta is any outside money—dollars, sterling, marks, francs — anything which is stabilized and has a gold standard.

All of the larger and better hotels are on a valuta basis here. Meals served in the rooms are calculated in dollars, and soup the restaurants in these hotels will be placed on a gold basis. Traveling is on valuta when one goes first class. Sleeping car tickets must be purchased through Intourist, the state tourist agency, and there one must pay in valuta.

Tourists Pay in Dollars.

Tourists enter Russia on a valuta basis. They pay for their tours in foreign currency before arrival and often they book them. Thus they have no occasion to use the local money, rubles and kopecks, during their entire stay. Several stores are on a valuta basis, food shops and general stores like Torgsin, where purchases must be made only in dollars.

Up to now one presented exchange vouchers received from the state bank when foreign money was converted into rubles at the official rate of one ruble and 94 kopecks for every dollar or valuta on the gold basis.

The new plan calls for an issue of a special form of currency, at first only for foreigners, tourists, and such affluent Russians, who can afford it, in the form of national travelers' checks. Eventually the plan is to make the new currency general and retire the chervonetz and ruble.

Ruble Drops to Ten Cents.

The purchasing power of the ruble, officially quoted as 50 cents, has dropped to about ten cents. This is due in some extent to the limited supply of certain restricted articles which can be bought at all. The inability to expend money for material needed economically cheapens that money, as it then cannot fulfill the object for which it was created—namely: purchasing.

In valuta shops where only the gold ruble is accepted, prices are about one-fifth what they are in other stores. This is a tacit admission by the government, which fixes prices in all state shops, that the paper ruble has weakened about 80 per cent.

According to the semi-monthly statements of the Gosbank, the state institution of emission possesses assets in gold, platinum, other precious metals, and foreign currencies and paper to the amount of nearly 600,000,000 rubles, or approximately $300,000,000.

Against this, among liabilities, is the paper circulation of something under two billion rubles. Thus, the proportion of gold coverage would be about 33 per cent, reckoned safe enough in financial circles. But there are grave doubts whether all the state bullion and valuta is free to guarantee the paper money extant.

Send Gold Bars Abroad.

There are trustworthy reports that large shipments of gold bars and ingots have been transferred to Berlin and other foreign banking centers as guarantee for purchases made abroad. There are reports that large blocks of foreign currency held by the soviet treasury have been pawned as security for material bought outside in connection with the five year plan.

Since the weakness of the ruble, due in part to its inability to purchase freely inside the country, thereby resulting in a plethora of paper with no medium for its free circulation from hand to hand and a lack of confidence in the ability of the state to cover this vast array of paper with a gold backing.

OAK PARK MAN TELLS OF MISERY HE SAW IN RUSSIA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 11.—"On the trip across Siberia and Russia they rob you right and left," said John Heist, one of the owners of Brooks Laundry in Oak Park, Ill., and a member of the Oak Park Rotary club, when he arrived in Berlin today from the far east. "I was glad to be out of Russia, away from appalling misery and poverty. The Russian masses are being deprived of food and the necessities of life to provide gold for the survival of the merciless soviet system.

"When you get into Russia they take your dollars away, promising that you will let them back when you leave; but all I could get at the border for my dollars when I left Russia was currency which was not on par with the American dollar."

CHARGES FRAUD PLOT BY OFFICERS OF BOND FIRM

New Petition Is Filed in Receivership Case.

Charges of conspiracy to defraud investors were contained in an intervening petition filed in the federal court yesterday against the president and two other officers of the Straus Brothers' Investment company, 33 North La Salle street, for which the Chicago Title and Trust company had been appointed receiver.

The petition, which asks the court to appoint a committee to take over the affairs of the company, was filed on behalf of five men who hold stocks and bonds of the concern with a total value of $2,000,000. They are Ernest G. Shiner, Elmer Wedeles, Dr. Lyman G. Gould, George G. Buist, and Sol Henoch.

Charges Plot to Get Stock.

The petition alleges that Maurice H. Van Bergh, president, and Louis and Gustave Frankel, officers of the company, conspired to wrest control of the company's preferred stock by organizing the Straus Brothers' Holding company and inducing holders of preferred stock in the original concern to exchange it for stock in the latter.

Van Bergh and the Frankel brothers also are alleged to have circularized bond holders, advising them that their real estate mortgages were depreciating in value and suggesting that they be deposited in exchange for other bonds in connection with a proposed reorganization. The defendants are charged with acting without authority of the directors and with using stationary of the company to circularize the bondholders.

Sees Profit of 15 Million.

According to Attorney Samuel Hirsch, representing the intervenors, the alleged plan would have netted the defendants between $5,000,000 and $15,000,000 had it been carried out. The Straus company has financed hotel and apartment buildings aggregating $65,000,000 according to Attorney Hirsch.

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward granted leave to the filing of the petition and subpoenaes were issued requiring the defendants to answer within five days.

The concern has no connection with S. W. Straus & Co. of 306 South Michigan avenue.

SEXTON TAKES OATH AS HEAD OF LAW DEPARTMENT

William H. Sexton took his oath of office as corporation counsel yesterday. He first conferred with Francis X. Busch, his predecessor, regarding matters pending in the city law department.

"I know that I have a hard job in view of the financial condition of the city and the many matters pending in the legislature," the new corporation counsel said. "I will do all in my power to make the administration of Mayor Cermak a success."

300 'Young Republicans,' Led by Fess, Whoop for Hoover

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Three hundred [Young Republicans whooped for Hoover today as they listened to salesmen's pep talks by the sales managers of their party. The occasion was the first session of the two day conference of Young Republicans at the Willard hotel.

The Young Republicans, including some not so young, heard Mr. Hoover's record extolled and his reelection confidently predicted. They whooped ecstatically. They heard insurgency excoriated and the denouncers of a high tariff denounced. They whooped belligerently.

Like Precinct Meeting.

All in all, it was like a local meeting of precinct workers—very much dressed up, of course, and minus the cigar smoke. And, by the same token, it was very gratifying to Mr. Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, who had staged it and to Senator Simeon D. Fess, and Postmaster General Brown, who were among the speakers delivering messages to be taken back home.

To Senator Fess, as chairman of the national committee, fell the job of delivering the keynote address. Gone was the silence which characterized the senator during the last session of congress when his chief was under a Democratic-Radical Republican cross fire.

"When the American people realize what President Hoover has done for them in the present emergency, he will not only be unanimously renominated, but he will be overwhelmingly reelected," said the senator.

Side Swipes Insurgents.

Jumping the track of his prepared address, he took a side swipe at the insurgents of his party.

"An insurgency which holds the balance of power and is responsible to no party," he declared, "is destructive to the party responsibility which is the safeguard of our system of government."

If such insurgency persists, he predicted, the American bi-partisan system will be superseded by the European system of blocs and coalitions.

"There must be no insurgency in our party," said Senator Fess, "which refuses to abide by the party leadership."

Calls Hoover Masterful.

Senator Fess praised the accomplishments of the Republican party and told of the "masterful and heroic steps" taken by President Hoover to combat a depression which was not of his making.

"As recently was said," he concluded, "we should be thankful that we have at the head of the nation a man who is the embodiment of all that is capable, strong, patient, sympathetic, all that is protective, conservative, purposeful and benficial. Such is President Hoover."

The three hundred delegates, gathered from all parts of the country, responded with cheers.

Postmaster General Brown in welcoming the delegates, also praised the courage and ability of the President.

Californian Speaks Out.

Representative Arthur M. Free of California, who represents the President's home congressional district, took Herbert Hoover from his boyhood days to the White House. He said Mr. Hoover had foregone the chances of great wealth by going into the service of humanity at a time when his services as an engineer would have been extremely valuable.

"Mr. Hoover is not a wealthy man in the sense that we understand a wealthy man today," said the congressman.

Then he extolled Mr. Hoover for his work in the commerce department.

"He is America's best salesman," Mr. Free declared. Then he, too, swung into an attack on the President's political enemies.

Puts Blame on Senate.

"An antagonistic senate prevented him from doing the things that would have brought about relief, had he had his way," said Representative Free. "I say it with pride as a member of the house, that the house stood by the President at the last session and will at the next.

"President Hoover is shy, reserved. He blushes if you give him praise; he does not want praise. Yet he becomes a masterful leader when given the chance to lead and those who work with him come to worship him almost to the point of fanaticism. He is not expressive. He is timid and retiring. All he wants is to be let alone to work at his job. He is prepared for tough jobs. He has one before him now and is doing it well. All that is necessary is that the country have confidence in him.

Takes Shot at Democrats.

"Our Democratic friends have been having fun laughing at the President. But when the wet Raskob Democrats of the north meet with the dry Democrats of the south and try to agree on a candidate and platform, then it's we who are going to laugh. I have traveled all over the country recently and think I know public sentiment. Herbert Hoover is going to be the nominee of the Republican party and is going to be reelected in 1932."

The 300 gave their cheer standing and stamping their feet.

Still another attack on the insurgents was made by John B. Chapple, editor of the Ashland, Wis., Daily Press. He called them "disciples of destruction," who had grown daring under the stimulus of the depression and "taken advantage of discontent to breed distrust." They employed half truths, he declared, in their effort to drug America into an acceptance of a doctrine such as rules in communist Russia.

"These destroyers," he said, "would replace individual initiative, freedom to work out one's own destiny, and the private ownership and operation of our great American business and industrial organizations by political-industrial tyranny at the head of which they hope to place themselves in power.

"In Wisconsin, a festering spot for this doctrine, measures to put the state into the banking, cement, utility, and other businesses, and to suppress free speech and free press, are before the present session of the legislature."

PERJURY PLOT IS CHARGED AT PANTAGES TRIAL

San Diego, Cal., June 11.—(AP)—Six witnesses were subpoenaed today for appearance before the county grand jury as District Attorney Tom Whelan investigated an alleged plot to suborn perjury for the defense of Jesse H. Shreve, a defendant with Alexander Pantages, wealthy showman, in the Hollywood "girl market" case.

Whelan said subpoenas had been issued for Archie Shreve, his brother, Jesse; William Weiner, one of Shreve's employés; C. J. Bassler, one of Shreve's defense attorneys, and the two women who charged yesterday that attempts had been made to obtain from them "lies on the witness stand."

The women are Mrs. May Siens and her friend, May Corneil, a widow of Chicago.

E. Byron Siens, oil promoter and husband of one of the accusers, was held incommunicado in the city jail in connection with the investigation.

The investigation was launched after Mrs. Siens filed a divorce complaint in which she alleged her husband kicked her last Sunday when she refused to give "perjured testimony" for Shreve. She said Shreve and Weiner were present at the time.

INDIAN JOE, ONCE HIGHWAY TERROR, TAKEN TO PRISON

Indian Joe Huszar, former police chief of Broadview and for a long time the terror of motorists in the western suburbs, yesterday began his sentence of one to 14 years for assaulting a motorist. With 13 other prisoners he was placed on a train for Joliet. Huszar was captured recently in Pueblo, Col.

Indian Joe was sulky as he was taken aboard a Chicago and Alton train with other prisoners at the 37th street terminal of the railroad. He disappeared two years ago while free on bond after his conviction.

Widespread publicity of his reign of terror along the western highways and the concerted efforts of motor clubs resulted in his conviction for molesting motorists.

"Assures delicious coffee"

Says Mrs. Leon Mandel II

"My favorite coffee is Manor House—the one blend whose flavor never varies—the one blend that assures me of delicious coffee at all times. And to me, good coffee is always important whether I'm entertaining at a chatty little luncheon or at the most formal dinner. With Manor House, I never have a doubt. It makes good coffee a certainty."

Do you have trouble in keeping the flavor of your coffee uniform? Does it vary from one week to the next? Then be comforted. The fault isn't yours. It's the fault of the coffee you are using—the blend itself varies in flavor.

To maintain a uniform blend is difficult—the most difficult task the coffee maker faces. But among the many things three generations in the coffee business have taught the McLaughlin family is not only how to blend a fine coffee—but how to keep that blend always the same. You may be sure that any coffee bearing the McLaughlin name will be always uniform. Its flavor never varies.

Mrs. Mandel is a New York girl, a Cornell graduate, and a dilettante in art. She attends the symphonies and violin concerts, and is both patron and student of the Art Institute. Her chief hobby is the collecting of old furniture and prints. And every nook and vista of her spacious apartment overlooking Lincoln Park reflects her excellent taste—even to the lovely old blue Spode reposing on a priceless mahogany buffet, from which she so often serves cups of delicious Manor House to friendly visitors.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overcome resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter."

—Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S SMOKE SCREEN.

The board of education, facing a desperate financial situation, has been devoting hours of its time to the discussion of a fantastic scheme to issue $50,000,000 in bonds for the purpose of building schools. Yesterday afternoon, with only two dissenting votes, the board adopted the scheme.

It is to be hoped that parents and teachers will not be confused by this attempt to divert attention from the only matter to which the board should be giving attention at this moment. The discussion and adoption of the bond issue is merely a smoke screen intended to conceal the fact that between 1925 and 1931 school attendance has increased only 10 per cent, while the cost of administration has advanced 60 per cent; the cost of instruction, 30 per cent; the cost of the so-called coördinated activities, 85 per cent; the auxiliary functions, 83 per cent; the cost of operating the school plants, 106 per cent, and the cost of maintaining the plant, 206 per cent.

A majority of the school board would prefer not to have much attention paid the fact that in 1926 it cost $4,406,000 to operate the school plant, while in 1931, when all commodities had declined sharply in value, the same item in the budget is placed at $8,132,000. Some of the members and their coconspirators in raiding the school funds would rather divert public opinion, if possible, from the comparison brought out in the Cleveland bureau's audit, which shows that in Chicago 14.51 per cent of the current expenses on schools is devoted to the operation of schools as opposed to educational purposes, while in New York the comparative figure is 6.21 per cent, and the average in a dozen cities, including Chicago, is 8.99.

It is cold facts such as have been recited which prove the incompetence of the board for an able, not to say honest, administration of its funds. Naturally the members who are responsible for the waste, in conspiracy with those in a position to profit from it, would rather change the subject.

If any teachers or parents are disposed to give a moment's attention to the $50,000,000 bond issue proposal which the board has now asked the legislature to authorize, let them consider the probability of floating such an issue now, at a time when the credit of Chicago's governments is at low ebb, when they are unable to borrow even short term money, when one government is already in default on its bond issues and others are headed in the same direction.

The members of the board who are making desperate efforts to conceal their own shortcomings, we are confident, will not succeed in hoodwinking the parents and teachers of Chicago. The board, as it is constituted, has lost the confidence not only of the present city administration but of the teaching force and the people of Chicago as well.

A grand jury investigation into corruption and bribery among school board members and their confederates is a vital necessity.

THE PEEKSKILL FLOTILLA.

The other day, writes Tom Pettey, TRIBUNE correspondent in New York, "three sea bitten hulks—the last of the Peekskill flotilla of world war emergency vessels—were turned down the river to join their sixty-five remaining sister ships off Staten Island." A discreet proceeding from the official viewpoint, perhaps, but regrettable, we think, from that of the public welfare. In Peekskill, this flotilla was exposed to the observation of tens of thousands of Americans bound to or from New York, and must have been the subject of some profitable meditations. Now these ships and their lesson will be out of sight and out of mind.

Yet there is no chapter in the history of our wartime enthusiasm containing more meat for our digestion than that of our building of the emergency ships. We built them in a mood of ingenuous, of guileless, emotion, incited by the desperate plight of the nations to whose succor we were hastening in the war to end war, the war to make the world safe for democracy. Ships, and ships, and more ships came the cry from England as the submarine dealt its deadly blows. So we built hurriedly without thought of cost or utility. These emergency ships were usable in war conditions, but they had little if any survival value. They could not compete in peace times with the well designed carriers of other maritime nations. They were foredoomed to Peekskill and decay.

Meanwhile, in the midst of their imminent peril, the British were building, too, but they were building not merely for the emergency but for permanent utility. Though their need was far greater than ours, they were not to be hurried into unprofitable construction. This was but one instance, though a clear one, of the superior self-control and unshakable foresight which kept the British mind, in spite of any crisis, firmly considerate of the future.

Our inexpert building was of course partly the result of our long neglect of maritime affairs. Once the American people would have built the best ships in any stress. But the shipbuilding knowledge and skill of our forefathers had been largely lost and our improvisations were deplorable. It was gigantic and unnecessary waste, but it was more and worse than that. It was the price, a part of the price, we paid for the emotional susceptibility which is our special weakness, a strange quality in a people supposed to be preëminently practical. Perpetually reproached for selfish materialism though we are, no nation involved in the war so completely ignored its own material interests and gave its unthinking devotion to what it believed to be its duty to a great cause. It has not saved us from the abuse of spokesmen for peoples whose need we served, but it is a subject for reflection among our own people now that on every hand we are exhorted to think in terms of the world's welfare by nations which show no practical evidence of doing the like.

UNSCRAMBLING THE ILLINOIS CONGRESSMEN.

To some extent congressional reapportionment seems to be hanging on the question of whether Congressman Henry Rainey, veteran of the Twentieth district, can be made safe for Democracy and whether Richard Yates, symbol of the old war school of Republicanism, can be preserved to carry on for the fireside and the flag. There are other similar questions concerning feudal rights and boxed in constituencies and they obscure the real issue of whether the representation in congress from this state shall be equal or not.

The reapportionment bill would give the metropolitan district in the counties about Chicago fourteen districts out of the twenty-seven, thus, in a way at least, adjusting representation to population. The two congressmen at large would be given districts. The legislature has refused to give itself constitutional form by restoring Cook county's representation in the general assembly. If it does not want a perfect record of contempt for the representative form of government it will straighten out the congressional situation. The passage of a congressional reapportionment bill may prove to be one of the few commendable acts of the present assembly. It cannot afford to pass up one of its few probabilities.

THE BLUDGEON IN KANSAS.

Citizens of Lawrence, Kas., have petitioned Gov. Woodring to save two state university students from six months in jail. They were sentenced on a liquor charge. They were arrested last February and were in jail for some time trying to conceal their identity and avoid the disgrace to their families. Now, unless the governor helps them, they must serve a half year because they had liquor in their possession.

If every college boy who has had intoxicants in his possession were to be punished thus the jails probably would have as many students as the colleges. It is a wholly irrational law and Kansas is one of the least rational states under it. The law is not only irrational, it is sadistic. It delights in strange and savage punishments for the satisfaction of the extremists and bigots who take pleasure in pouncing on victims. Whatever one may think of the use of intoxicants by young people—and it has nothing to commend it—the punishment of young men as criminals for such an offense isn't civilized, nor is the state which permits it.

PERSONAL PROPERTY TAXES.

In all the muddle of Illinois tax laws the item of personal property levies is the most ridiculous. It contains the greatest spread of inequalities and therefore of inequities. It is largely based on a fantastic conception of taxable possessions, as is revealed in the very schedule which the taxpayer is expected to make under oath. It is archaic in form and substance. It contains the feudal assumption that if the subject has two chickens the baron will take one. Some political tax doctors here are proposing that personal property be hunted out and the feudal levy be clamped down harder. The probable consequence would be the flight of property as fast as wealthy and competent citizens could move it or, where escape was impossible, a virtually confiscatory raid upon the resources of persons whose means of livelihood would be seriously impaired if not destroyed.

In one respect the personal property tax is a luxury tax, in another it is a tax upon the means by which a person supports himself or family and not upon the proceeds from it. That is feudal in that it is not concerned whether the living remains after the tax on its source has been satisfied. A state which was indifferent to such consequences would soon wreck itself, and that is why the personal property tax is one thing in the law and another thing in usage. It is so absurd that the only justice is found in general conspiracy to evade or defeat it.

Editorial of the Day

THE RAILROADS.

[The Southwest Courier, Oklahoma City.]

It does not take people long to forget favors; so they have forgotten the days when the headlight of an engine was a star of hope. When it threw its first beam across the prairies the pioneer knew that he was no longer alone. The engine cut down the distance that separated him from the old home and his fellow men. It carried former joys to his door and gave him markets that doubled the value of his crops. It meant more companionship and increased value for his possessions. It delivered books for the children, seed for his fields, papers for the long prairie nights, and people to make a city within reach of his farms. The railroad was the key that opened the door of the west and the door of opportunity at the same time. What would we have been if we had, like Mexico, revolutions instead of railroads? A child could answer that question.

Now we forget and so the pavements, built with our money that the railroads helped us to make, are used to drive our old benefactor to the wall. We tax him to poverty. We shake our fists in the face of the headlight. We suffer discomfort rather than accept his plans to satisfy our desire to travel at ease. We see in his progress a menace and in his expansion a curse. He can do nothing without a fight and an unfair one at that.

Let us think back to the days when we needed the railroads and the railroads came. If we cannot be grateful, let us at least be fair. Fairness is a little thing, but an old friend would be glad to have it.

"PICKISH" CHILDREN.

THIS story was told the writer by a physician who grew up in western Ontario—well, let us say, sixty-five years ago. They lived in a pioneer farming community. Their diet consisted principally of meat, flour, cereals made from grains, edible roots, such as potatoes and beets, milk and milk products.

He was a slender child, rather tall for his age. The family tradition is that he was a "pickish" eater. Others might have called him a "picky" eater, and still others a "finicky" eater. A child that is normal in temperament and personality is built on the average lines and is in good health, is husky, and has an appetite to match.

He works harder than a ditch digger, he grows night as well as day, and his excessive proportion of skin surface—all combined—requires that he should eat more ounces of food per pound of his weight than an adult does. Therefore we expect him to go to the table ready to eat all of whatever is put before him and even to threaten the table cloth and silverware.

If he is not equipped with that kind of an appetite there must be something wrong. There was something wrong with this fellow. It was not a case of too much attention or "mamma's darling" with him. He was one of a half dozen in a good old Celtic family, and he had to be satisfied with his share of parental care. He had the great good fortune of home education by a family of sisters and brothers.

If there is anything in this matter of build then his body type was partly at fault. He was a long, lean fellow, one of the linear type. His diet was also at fault. He lived on a farm in an inland region sixty-five years ago, and his diet was not well balanced. When he grew older he got a job on the Pacific slope with a surveying party. There he had sea food and a different diet, and he was permanently cured of being a "pickish" eater. As it is, he is now seventy-five years old, well built, strong, in good flesh, vigorous, and good for many active years.

So far as this applies, it proves that change of diet is of some service in curing the "pickish" eater of his "pickishness." However, it is better proof that a "pickish" child may grow into a strong man, with a long life expectancy, and that he may live happily ever afterward.

RATHER COMMON DISORDER.

M. writes: Is a blood clot in the left leg after childbirth very serious? The patient was in bed six weeks and at the start of the seventh was allowed to sit up in bed. The doctor advised two or more weeks in bed after this. Would it be dangerous for patient to get up now? What is the cause of this and will it leave any ill effects? Will it affect the walking in any way? The leg, although very swollen when the trouble started, is almost down to normal now. However, it still pains now and then.

REPLY.

Milk-leg is a rather common disorder. It is supposed to be due to a mild infection in the blood or lymph stream, or both. As a rule, it does not endanger life. However, it is always an inconvenient and unpleasant complication and, occasionally, it is a dangerous one.

CARBUNCLES AND WARTS.

E. G. writes: What is the cause of a carbuncle? What can be done at home to cure?

REPLY.

Carbuncle belongs to the tumor family. Perhaps it is more nearly related to the tribe of warts than to other members of the family. Nobody knows much about what causes any of the tumors. Some warts are due to mild infections, and the same may be true of carbuncles. Like most warts, carbuncle is usually cured by training. Local dryness and cleanliness are of service in curing both warts and carbuncles.

PRIMROSES AND ECZEMA.

J. writes: Is it true that contact with the Chinese primrose will cause some people to have an eruption of the skin?

REPLY.

It is. Many cases of so-called eczema are due to contact with this or some other plant.

CATCHING SUNDAY'S DINNER.

Chicago, June 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—We are buying a home and have worked all spring to fix the yard. The neighbors' chickens come over in our yard all the time. We have asked the people six times to keep them in the park. They say that law does not compel a person to coop them up. How can we keep our yard nice if we have to have these chickens in our yard all the time? F. B.

We know of no satisfactory legal remedy. We hear that some persons pursue with apparent satisfaction under such provocation the nonlegal remedy of quietly catching and eating enough of the marauding fowls to balance their damage.

CHANGING TAX RECORDS.

Chicago, June 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Our lot was originally 35x100 feet. About twenty years ago the city bought from us a strip 8x100 and put a public alley through the block, taking the same eight feet from all lots on the other half of the alley. Evidently description of our lot has never been changed on city records, for on all tax notices, etc., same is shown as 35x100 and evidently all our taxes are larger than they should be, being based on the original 35 foot frontage.

1. How can one go about getting a correction made? 2. How can one get a refund for portion of taxes not properly charged? H. D. J.

1. Take the matter up with the assessor's office.

2. In general, a person who voluntarily pays improper taxes is not entitled to recover. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OWNER'S RESPONSIBILITY.

Calumet City, Ill., June 8. — [Legal Friend of the People.]—I let a contract. 1. Should the contractor neglect to pay his men or bills for any material used in the building of my home could I, the owner, be held responsible for these payments? If so, is there any method of paying contractor whereby I could be assured of his paying his above debts?

MRS. N. B.

1. Yes, unless you have secured waivers of lien from the possible claimants.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

IT WILL BE MOST ASTOUNDING!

Tomorrow is Saturday, and quite a large number of our population will turn their machines towards the country. It will be a very illuminating visit if the trippers only use their powers of observation and silent thought. Trees, it will be found by earnest study, are still growing from the ground and are covered with beautiful green leaves. Strange as it may seem, the hillsides are still full of beautiful grass and wild flowers are still growing in lavish profusion everywhere. Overhead, it would be well to note the blue sky and the white fleecy clouds. Yes, indeed, they are up there, as usual, and will probably remain for quite some time. And the sun will be up there in the sky and shining brightly on one and all. And the little brooks will be tumbling merrily through the valleys and the birds calling gayly to each other from the trees. Those of us who have headaches and heartaches from taking the depression and the farm board and the new bathing suits and the tariff and prohibition's woes to heart and who have listened to too many ghost stories about everything going to the demnition bowwows should take note of all these things. They will do us good. And at night as you edge your way, foot by foot, in the long line of cars parading into town, look up and see the bright shiny stars in the heavens. They've been there for thousands and thousands of years and will very likely stay there for thousands and thousands of years more. Things may be bad, but the world hasn't come to an end after all.

NECESSITY.

I hold it is each soul's necessity
Some measure to attain of luxury;
A gilded bird cage in a gloomy flat,
Its inmate eyed by Conscience's gray cat,
A flower flaunting on a window sill
Ambitiously ten stories up, yet still Ignored, except at noonday, by the sun,—
A little sentiment, a little fun;
Something we do not need at all, but crave,
Something to toss aside that we should save,
Something extracted from tomorrow's hoard
To spend today for things we can't afford.

It's such a joy sometimes to sacrifice
A grim necessity for something nice,
And if one strives to live by bread alone
The bread turns, like as not, into a stone.

EOLUS.

FALLING METEORS are being reported from all parts of the country, coming down with a roar and terrible display of flame and burying themselves deep in the earth. Probably they aren't meteors at all—just presidential booms that went off prematurely. Since the meteor that came down in Ohio was reported not a word has been heard of the big boom for Gov. Ritchie of Maryland. Maybe that was it.

STUDENTS in colleges of journalism, take note! "Bandits Miss $4,000; Flee in Hail of Lead." —Chiherex. Prying deeply into this case we find that one man was shooting at the bandits. Observe then, children, this simple rule: When one man is doing the shooting it is always a "hail of lead." If two persons should fire at fleeing bandits then it must be called an "avalanche of lead." If you have grasped this first essential of true journalistic work, dear children, you may now come forward and get your diplomas.

THE CUBAN REVOLUTION seems to have been postponed just as the rainy season begins. It is understood that all insurgents and national soldiers, as well as spectators, have been given rain checks good any day when hostilities resume in the fall.

ANDY MELLON, the w. k. Secretary of the Deficit, sailed for England Wednesday, and when asked if he intended to discuss the question of reparations while over there replied that he was not. All right as far as it goes. And if Andy will promise us not to discuss the weather with Mr. Montagu Norman while he's over there we'll not give up all hope of some time getting some of the money they owe us.

CONGRESSMAN DYER of Missouri is pesticating around to have four per cent beer legalized on the grounds that it would add a billion dollars every year additional income to the government. But lissen, Congressman Dyer, it's a grand idea, and we're with you, but up to the hour of going to press last night, Congressman Dyer, your scheme has as much chance of success right now as a snowball has to retain its shape through a hot summer away down in a place politely and euphoniously known as Sheol.

REWARD.

Love may beckon. I'll not heed.
For his sharp kiss I have no need.

I'll not answer any call to run the path and trip and fall.

Once I would have traded life to run against his gleaming knife,

but now I stand and wonder why
I am so cold to beauty's cry.

NEWS ITEM—THE TENNESSEE ASSEMBLY VOTES 58 TO 14 AGAINST REPEAL OF LAW PROHIBITING THE TEACHING OF EVOLUTION

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 12, 1915.

CHICAGO.—A meeting in the mayor's office today will determine whether there is to be a strike of the 14,250 street car employes of Chicago. At the meeting will be William D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employes, who will contend the traction companies are making enormous profits and that the wages of the men are far too low. He will also declare that arbitration is out of the question unless the men are offered a substantial increase in wages.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—William J. Bryan, resigned secretary of state, delivered the third of his broadsides on the controversy with Germany. In a statement addressed to the German-American citizens, he urges that they do everything within their power to help maintain peaceful relations between this country and their fatherland. That no misconstruction should be placed on his first statement in which he criticized President Wilson for declining to make some effort to prevent Americans traveling on ships carrying ammunition, Mr. Bryan comes out flatly against the submarine warfare.

LONDON. — German opinion is unanimously against granting President Wilson's demand for assurances that American ships and lives will not be endangered by submarine warfare, according to a Berlin dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company sent by way of Amsterdam. The dispatch says that official circles are pessimistic regarding the continued maintenance of friendly relations with the United States.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 12, 1901.

WASHINGTON.—President McKinley will not under any circumstances be a candidate for a third term.

CHICAGO.—Under successive waves of torridity which prostrated ten persons and gave the city the hottest day of the year so far, the straw hat crop burst into full bloom and dotted the streets and pavements with a summery white and yellow. The thermometer stood at 89 from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

CHICAGO.—Highwood was "wide open" yesterday, for it was pay day at Fort Sheridan and more than $10,000 was distributed among the soldiers. The saloons were quiet for the most part, but the soldiers were belligerent in their drunkenness, gambling was free and the stakes high. By evening the guardhouse was crowded.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 12, 1881.

LIVERPOOL. — Two Irishmen named Roberts and McKevett attempted to blow up the town hall here with dynamite and might have succeeded not only in blowing up the hall, but in blowing a number of innocent people into eternity, had not some policemen who were watching them thrown the case containing the dynamite into the street before it exploded. Documents found in the possession of the two men connect them with the Fenians. They were well supplied with money and it is believed they are the agents of a dangerous lunatic living in New York who calls himself O'Donovan-Rossa.

TOPEKA, KAS.—A terrific hail and wind storm swept over a part of Dickinson county in the vicinity of Soloman City. The hurricane swept a track six miles long and five miles wide, demolishing nearly everything in its path. Some of the hailstones were ten inches in circumference. Seven persons were killed.

PARIS.—Msgr. Lewis Gaston de Segur, an eminent French prelate and author of numerous religious works, is dead at the age of 61.

CHICAGO.—Prof. Bachus of Vassar college received application from five young ladies for admission to the institution on the Hudson. The girls were examined during the morning and their knowledge of algebra and the first four books of geometry, together with their ability to translate Cicero and Vergil, was severely tested. This is the first year in which examinations for the institution have been held in Chicago.

WHAT THE TEACHERS SAY.

Chicago, June 7.—Do State street merchants realize that 14,000 possible customers are holding on to every penny, buying only the barest necessities of life? I refer to the public school teachers, who are usually discriminating and dependable buyers. If the merchants, through their organizations, were to help settle the tax difficulties, or induce the banks to advance money for salaries, they would not need to send letters to teachers inquiring why their accounts are so long unused.

With April salaries two weeks late, May salaries unpaid, and nothing in view but "scrip" for this year and next, we teachers, believe me, are not putting what money we have into circulation. A TEACHER.

WASTE IN THE SCHOOLS.

Chicago, June 7.—For a number of years back, in the face of a large deficit, the board of education added several new departments to the school and curriculum, and appointed a host of supervisors and supernumeraries which added millions of dollars every year to this deficit.

Take, for instance, the equipping of typewriting rooms with dictaphone paraphernalia at a big expense, and trying to teach typing from records. Ask the typing teachers about this arrangement foisted on them without their sanction. Business and private schools get at least as good results without dictaphones. Just glance at the test given a few weeks ago.

At the rate the school budget was increasing the expenditures would double in a few years. We would have several colleges added to our system. Again, ask the classroom teacher about the political appointees who rub off the room door and washbowl several times a day in order to keep busy, but never touch the windows.

Cut the teachers' salaries and you ruin the morale of our schools. Discharge political appointees and lop off departments that were created in recent years. J. B.

REFLECTION ON BANK MERGERS.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—What we want is stability and not mergers. What this country needs is that every banker stand squarely behind the next banker and the federal reserve bank stand squarely behind them all. No halfway measures will do and squeezing the weak bank means only squeezing the depositors.

We need a leader and our President should be the man. His first job should be to throw Mellon and every other banker out of his cabinet. Then get real business men who know enough to protect themselves to run things. Within a few months this country would be enjoying real prosperity, for it doesn't matter whether a dollar is worth 3 cents or 100 cents as long as it does its duty as often as called upon.

CHICAGO AT THE LINCOLN DEDICATION.

Springfield, Ill., June 1.—President Herbert Hoover of the United States of America is coming to Springfield, Ill., June 17, to deliver an address at the dedication ceremonies of Lincoln's tomb. The music program under the direction of Mr. William Dodd Chesney is to consist of a local chorus of 150 white singers and a chorus of 150 local colored singers of Springfield and Decatur, directed by James A. Mundy of Chicago.

The general music committee has invited the Joliet band, national high school band prize winners, the girl drum and bugle corps of East St. Louis and the Mundy choristers, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S Chicagoland Festival prize winners, also to participate in the program.

Each city is expected to see to it that the musical group invited is here on the 17th of June to render service on the historical program. The Mundy choristers are willing to sacrifice a day's work so as to make the trip to Springfield, but they are without the funds which are necessary to hire two buses.

We, the undersigned members of the house of representatives of the state of Illinois in session at Springfield, Ill., most respectfully solicit the cooperation of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in an endeavor to raise sufficient funds for the Mundy choristers to make the trip.

We make this request, realizing the success of the recent Chicago Jubilee celebration which had its origin in the editorial room of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and having in mind your spirit of helpfulness to the general community which you so splendidly serve.

TRIBUTES PAID SLAIN MEXICANS ON WAY HOME

Escort, Kin of Rubio, Has Kind Words for America

Laredo, Tex., June 11.—(AP)—Expressions of continued friendship for Americans were left behind by Salvador Cortes Rubio, cousin of President Pascual Ortiz Rubio of Mexico, as he traveled homeward tonight on a train bearing the bodies of two fellow Mexicans slain by a deputy sheriff at Ardmore, Okla.

To American officials who greeted him here he was quoted as saying, "I am glad to see you, but I am sorry it is under such circumstances. I am still the friend of Americans."

The bodies of Emilio Cortes Rubio and Raoul Garcia Gomez, the former also a cousin of the Mexican president, were given into the care of their countrymen after last respects had been paid by officials and citizens of the United States.

Due in Mexico City Saturday.

The train crossed the Rio Grande to Nuevo Laredo this afternoon and is due in Mexico City about 2 a. m. Saturday.

Col. Charles E. Clowe of Ardmore, representing Gov. W. H. Murray of Oklahoma, and Messina Murray, the governor's son, accompanied the funeral party across the international bridge, leaving the train there.

In Nuevo Laredo Mexican citizens placed wreaths of flowers on the coffins.

Texans Pay Tribute.

As the train passed through Texas, mourning crowds gathered at railway stations in Fort Worth and San Antonio to pay a tribute.

The two deputy sheriffs at Ardmore, Okla., W. F. Gyeen and Cecil Crosby, charged with murder for the shooting of the two students, were at liberty today under $25,000 bond each, awaiting decision of District Judge Asa Wilson, as to the date for their trial. Indications were the trial would be set for late this month or early in July.

IRISH FREE STATE UNCOVERS SECRET REBEL ARSENAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, June 11.—Civil guards today discovered and raided a secret arsenal, one of the largest discovered since the civil war, in the recesses of the mountains around Dublin. It was believed to have been the headquarters of the Irish republican organization.

In addition to documents relating to the activities of a militant and treasonable organization, the guards found hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition, 125 rifles, 90 automatic pistols, and a number of Lewis machine guns. The munition dump was guarded by a trap mine which would have exploded at the slightest touch. The entrance to the chamber, through a three-foot square, was concealed by dry and other plants. The chamber, which is 25 feet square, was constructed of concrete. It contained sleeping accommodations for a number of men, tinned food and radios.

The police blew up the dugout because the trap mine and other explosives were too dangerous to move. The explosion shook Dublin, seven miles away.

3,000 ACRE "FARM LABORATORY" IS OPENED BY FORD

Seeks Solution of Agricultural Problem.

Detroit, Mich., June 11.—[Special.]—On a huge 3,000 acre "agricultural laboratory" in Lenawee county, in southern Michigan, Henry Ford, it was today revealed, is putting into effect the 25 per 28 hour day for farmers and farm laborers. While it is primarily an effort to solve the problems of agriculture, to open new doors of progress for the farmer, it also embraces Ford's penchant for the past.

Ford believes the solution of the farmer's problem lies in increased efficiency and the discovery of new markets for farm products, and for many years he has conducted experiments on his land at Dearborn, and now this work is to go forward on a large scale.

100 Are Employed.

The first intimation of the mammoth experiment came last November with the appearance of a mysterious land buyer. As the weeks passed and the purchases continued it became known that Ford was the real buyer. Prices ranged from $90 to $150 per acre and contracts provided that lands should be vacated early last April.

The Ford acres embrace land in the vicinity of Tecumseh, Mich., in Macon, Raisin, and Tecumseh townships. At present more than 100 men are being employed at $5 a day for eight hours—a work day and a wage unheard of in agriculture.

Many of the experiments conducted on the Ford farms in Dearborn are being tried out on a larger scale in Lenawee county. Ford has said repeatedly that one of the major problems of business and industry today is to correlate manufacturing and farming. He believes that many by-products of the farm can be of use to industry, thus widening the farmer's market and enabling him to buy more of industry's manufactures.

As an instance, Ford chemists have shown there are possibilities of the hulls of buckwheat being used as fuel for boilers and the ashes of the hulls going back to the farm for fertilizer.

Can Work in Winter.

The Ford plan also involves the establishment of small industrial plants, in which the farmer can work during the winter months, when there is little to do on his land.

One such plant is being constructed at Rawsonville, in Wayne county, near Ypsilanti, for the manufacture of textiles. Ford believes many such plants dotting the countryside and drawing labor from about twenty miles around in winter, will benefit both farmer and manufacturer.

The Tecumseh experiment is in full swing, with fleets of tractors plowing the land, seed machines closely following the tractors, and workers being transported to and from the fields by truck.

Line fences have been torn down, land cleared, and drains constructed so as to give the tractors a long sweep. In connection with the farm work Ford is reconstructing some of the ancestral farm homes, a mill, a blacksmith shop and a school.

The experiment in agriculture, critics believe, may lead to changes in farming as revolutionary as the changes in industry, which Ford brought about years ago.

Sentence 12 Burma Rebels to Death; 26 Get Life

RANGOON, Burma, June 11.—(AP)—Twelve natives were sentenced to death today and 26 others to prison for life for complicity in uprisings against the British government in the Tharawaddy district. A Buddhist monk was among those receiving life sentences.

30,000 NEW YORK CITY EMPLOYES FACE GRAFT QUIZ

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—The legislative inquiry into city affairs today became city wide in real earnest.

Broadening the investigation far beyond any previous intimation of its effective scope, Samuel Seabury, chief counsel for the Hofstadter committee, let it become known that he had applied to all department heads in the city for lists of persons having statutory discretionary powers, some 30,000 all told of the city's 130,000 employes.

This classification includes all who pass upon or revoke licenses, who fix taxes and assessments, or whose duties include filing charges of violations of city codes and with the enforcement of laws under which such violations had been found.

The demand strikes into a score or more of city bureaus and departments as well as into the offices of every borough president.

MINE STRIKERS STORM A JAIL; BATTLE POLICE

St. Clairsville, O., June 11.—[Special.]—A mob of 2,000 miners, their families and sympathizers tonight stormed the Belmont county jail here in an effort to release eleven strikers who had been jailed earlier in the day.

Sheriff Howard Dull, 13 special deputies, and a group of ex-service men surrounded the jail, armed with machine guns and tear bombs. The sheriff was seriously beaten when he arrested Leo Thompson of Pittsburgh, said to be the leader of the mob, and deputies threw tear bombs into the crowd. Seven women and five men were overcome by the gas.

Six other miners were arrested with Thompson, who is said to be a communist, and put in jail, bringing the number of arrests to eighteen.

There are about 1,200 miners on strike in Belmont county and the situation became acute early today when the horse of a miner who did not go out on strike was bombed.

DILL RETURNS, CONVINCED U. S. RADIO IS BEST

Europe's System 5 Years Behind, Senator Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—He returned from his recent trip to Europe, Senator Clarence C. Dill [Dem., Wash.] declared today, more than ever satisfied to be an American.

The senator landed day before yesterday from a trip intended primarily to study foreign radio systems. He is the author of the radio act under which the United States government regulates a radio industry carried on by private interests, contrasted with the practice abroad, where radio is a government monopoly.

Sees "No Comparison."

"Over here we have private initiative backed by the competitive effort to please," he said, speaking of broadcasting in the United States and in Europe. "We are so far ahead that there is no comparison. In most European countries their receiving sets are five years behind ours. A great majority of listeners still use three tube battery sets. In many cases they have to. For example, in London alone, electric current is supplied in fifty-eight different combinations of cycles and voltage."

Sees Radio Bootlegging.

Taxing radio receiving sets had resulted, he said, in radio bootlegging. In Birmingham, England, he recalled, the coming of the testing truck by which sets may be located had resulted in a 75 per cent increase in licenses taken out within two weeks. One thing he went to study, said Senator Dill, was television, but he found America two or three years ahead of Europe in that field.

Europe he found fearful of the spread of communism and the soviet radio station at Moscow being used to flood the continent with propaganda aimed particularly at Germany.

One European innovation he thought well of, and he plans to introduce appropriate legislation in the next congress. In Germany and England, he said, the government radio stations broadcast school programs.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Looking Ahead

BOY, 18, HUNTS ADVENTURE; DIES IN CANADA SNOW

Diary Bares His Fight Against Cold.

EDMONTON, Alta., June 11.—(AP)—The struggles of an 18 year old English schoolboy, inexperienced in woodcraft, to save himself from the clutches of winter in the north Canadian wilderness were revealed today in a diary found beside his body at the end of his trail.

The body of John Noel Patch Bennett, member of a wealthy family in Oakdene, England, was found by Kelly Sunderman, a guide, beside Tilicum creek after a search of seven months, and has been shipped to England.

Bennett set out alone from Grande Prairie last October with a pack horse, intending to make his way through Pine Pass to Prince George, British Columbia, for adventure.

Loses Trail in Snow.

Entries in the diary show that his troubles began on Oct. 27, when the autumn rains, presaging the coming of winter, set in. Two days later snow had obliterated the trail.

On Nov. 2 he lost his pack horse, and it took a day to find it. Two days later he discovered he was going on the wrong direction and had to retrace his steps. By Nov. 9 his supplies had dwindled to a tin of beans and a little flour.

Crosses Ice in Bare Feet.

His moccasins wore out and with his matches spoiled by water he was unable to build a fire to thaw his frozen feet. He lost his pack horse and crossed a frozen river in his bare feet.

The last entry in the diary was dated Nov. 16, written in a cabin where he spent a night. His body was found not far from the cabin.

WEIHAIWEI, China, June 11.—While British and Japanese boats are fighting to attempt to raise the British submarine Poseidon, which sank in 120 feet of water Tuesday, after being struck by a Japanese steamer, the American salvage ship Pigeon tonight was speeding to join the rescuers. Virtually all hope for the 18 men trapped in the Poseidon was abandoned.

Divers attempting to communicate with the trapped submarine crew by tapping the submarine have received no response to their signals. Rescue boats once had lines attached to the submarine and were in the act of raising the sunken ship when the cables slipped. The submarine was located again and new efforts were made to attach lines.

Thirty-five survivors of the accident are aboard the foundered boat's parent ship Medley.

GROCERY MAN OF 1876 WITNESS IN FIGHT OVER WILL

Matthew C. Hechtner, 87 years old, of Detroit, harked back to the days of 1876, when he delivered groceries to Mrs. Ida Marcoux, then the wife of a Detroit ship captain, in a hearing yesterday on her will before Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner. He was called to establish her whereabouts in that year.

Dr. Edmund J. Bollo, Detroit physician, is claiming the $60,000 estate left by Mrs. Marcoux when she died in 1929 at the age of 94.

The hearing was adjourned to June 26 at the request of Assistant State's Attorney Edgar B. Elder, who is seeking to have the will presented by Dr. Bollo declared a forgery, and to prove there are no heirs to the estate.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel up and up. They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when comes to making the bile flow freely.

but don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

DR. GOODELL, AUTO VICTIM, WILL BE BURIED IN INDIANA

DR. C. E. GOODELL.

Dr. Charles E. Goodell, 5612 Blackstone avenue, prominent educator, who was killed Wednesday night in an automobile accident north of Bloomington, Ill., will be buried tomorrow afternoon at Franklin, Ind., where from 1917 to 1926 he was president of Franklin college. Prof. R. H. Kent of Franklin college will officiate at the services.

The mishap that cost Dr. Goodell his life sent three associates to the Mennonite hospital in Bloomington. They are Henry F. Hughes, Miss Jennie Eddy, and Miss Anna Guthrie, all Chicagoans and all connected with teaching agencies. Miss Eddy and Hughes were seriously hurt, but are expected to recover. The four Chicagoans were returning in Dr. Goodell's car from Springfield when the crash occurred. They had been lobbying at the capital against a legislative measure affecting their and kindred work.

Motorcycle Policeman William Reichert, 5255 South Marshfield avenue, was critically injured yesterday when his vehicle struck a rut in front of 10115 South Wood street. He was taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital.

With no deaths reported yesterday, the county automobile death toll since Jan. 1 remained at 501.

SHOT 5 TIMES; NEAR DEATH, HE REFUSES TO TALK

Lorenzo Bua, 44 years old, was shot in the back and probably fatally wounded by one of two men who entered his grocery at 1905 Taylor street last night. At the county hospital, in spite of warnings that he was near death, Bua refused to talk. He lapsed into unconsciousness shortly after he was taken there.

His wife, Rose, 40 years old, and their children, Carlos, 11 years old, and Joseph, 8, were in their living quarters behind the store when Bua was shot. His assailants fled before Mrs. Bua could see them.

Five bullets struck Bua, three in the back, and the other two in the left shoulder and right wrist. The gunman dropped his weapon beside Bua as he fled.

As they left, Mrs. Bua said, the companion of the gunman remarked in casual tones, "Now look at the trouble you've got me into."

Bua bore a good reputation in the neighborhood, Sergt. Richard Johnston of the detective bureau said.

ASK RECEIVERS FOR KONJOLA IN CINCINNATI COURT

Cincinnati, O., June 11.—[Special.]—Suit for appointment of a receiver for Konjola, Inc., was filed in the United States District court here late today by the C. L. Doughty Advertising Agency company, Cincinnati, through Attorneys Stephen L. Blakely and John T. Murphy, Covington, Ky.

Konjola, Inc., was founded by Gilbert Mosby, a former waiter, known in Broadway, New York, and Chicago theatrical circles as the "Konjola King." He was the backer of a musical comedy which is reported to have cost him a quarter of a million dollars. Mosby's recent divorce suit revealed his extensive financing of young girl actresses and bathing beauties at New York, Indianapolis, Detroit, and Cincinnati. His wife, Mrs. Roberta Mosby, secured his half million dollar home here when she produced proof of Mosby's close association with actresses.

NITROGLYCERIN NOW BLAMED FOR OHIO EXPLOSION

Toledo, O., June 11.—[Special.]—Martin Cline, mayor of the village of Malinta, O., which yesterday was the center of a violent explosion, declared tonight that nitroglycerin and not a meteor apparently was the cause of the blast.

Earlier theories that a meteor had fallen to earth in the vicinity and caused the detonation have been abandoned, Mayor Cline said.

Edward Friedell, oil well expert, who investigated for the mayor, pointed out that a meteor would have made a much deeper hole and that dynamite would have left an odor of powder.

Chemists of the Great Lakes and Southwestern Oil and Gas company have taken samples of earth for analysis. They, too, feel certain it was a nitroglycerin blast, Mayor Cline said.

Police and county officials are unable to advance a theory to account for presence of nitroglycerin.

SCHILLING, FARM BOARD MEMBER, IS CLEVER COOK

How He Prepared '$1,000 Dinner' on $14.80.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Anybody here in Washington lucky enough to be invited to dine with William F. Schilling, member of the federal farm board, will break all other dates in order to accept. For he is both an eager epicure and a clever cook.

In fact, he is so clever that he recently cooked a "thousand dollar dinner" that cost exactly $14.80.

Here's the story of that dinner. He let fourteen friends, including the secretary of agriculture and Mrs. Hyde, the presidents' secretary and Mrs. Newton, and members of the farm board and their wives, to come up to his apartment one Sunday evening and have dinner with him.

They Dine on Turkey.

They came and ate turkey and cranberries. They took two helpings of cottage cheese prepared a special way with grated onion. It is rumored that Secretary Hyde took three helpings of the famous "Swedish salad" which Mr. Schilling concocted out of pickled beets and dried herring. And they washed their lips over his strawberry parfait.

Every detail of the meal got back to Mr. Schilling's home state of Minnesota, where he operates a large dairy farm. A political opponent down in Waseca wrote a blast in his newspaper, the Waseca Herald, declaring that the Minnesota farmer had gone "highbrow" since he went to Washington and had given a banquet at a swank hotel which had cost him $1,000. And that a "thousand dollar dinner" for 16 people, the article pointed out, was just about $62.50 per plate.

How He Did It.

Mr. Schilling heard of the attack. Although his voice is so powerful that he can make 5,000 people hear him at an outdoor meeting, he did not raise his voice in bad tempered reply. Instead, he turned to his diary. He has kept one since 1903. There he found recorded, down to the last penny, the expenditures for the much discussed meal.

He sat down and wrote a letter to his opponent. He told how he and his son Joel, in the absence of Mrs. Schilling, had cooked the dinner, "and it was a good one, too," and had served it, not in a swank hotel, but in his own apartment.

"I hired two Negro domestics for five hours to come in and serve so I could eat with the guests. I borrowed some chairs from the neighbors and we had flowers on each table, too, and here is what it cost to the penny, as entered in my diary for the day."

Mr. Schilling then listed these amounts:

Flowers for table	$ 1.50
11 pounds turkey at 45 cents	4.95
¾ pound calves liver for dressing	.20
1 loaf back number bread for dressing	.05
2 eggs for dressing	.05
3 cans sauer kraut	.30
2½ pounds spare ribs	.50
Cranberries	.35
4 pounds beans for baking	.25
Pork for same	.10
2 pounds fresh mushrooms	.80
2 cans pickled beets for salad	.20
1 glass jar dried herring for salad	.15
2 loaves bread	.14
3 quarts fresh strawberries	1.17
1 pint cream	.40
Oranges and grapefruit for drink	.75
½ pound coffee	.25
½ pound butter	.20
2 pounds sugar	.10
2 pints cottage cheese	.30
Waitresses (2) for 2 hours	2.00
Total cost	$14.80

"Now, John," the letter went on, "there's your dinner that cost 'thousands of dollars' and isn't it a peach? Take this home to your good wife and ask her to duplicate it for the money.

"But that isn't half the story, John. Joel and I had turkey, pork, sauerkraut, and baked beans for three days following and the smell of the sauerkraut stayed in the apartment for two weeks."

The letter has gone into many Minnesota kitchens. And Minnesota women are marveling at the feast that was set before a cabinet member at exactly 92½ cents per plate.

LACK VITAMINS? TRY CABBAGE; IT CONTAINS THEM

And Prices Are Cheaper than Year Ago.

That new cabbage, now on the market, is not only cheaper than it was a year ago, but due to overproduction is said to represent the "cream" of the crop. This is according to the report of local department of agriculture marketing specialists.

From Washington's home economics bureau, the further good news arrives that a pound of cabbage when cooked makes about five servings and with practically the whole head being edible, cabbage belongs in the menu "more elaborate, as well as in the low cost dietary."

Food Value Is High.

The abundance of food value contained in the crisp light green leaves of this vegetable is also attested by the government's kitchen experts. They term cabbage "a protective food because of its minerals and vitamin content.

"Calcium is perhaps its most important mineral," they assert. "It also contains some sulphur compounds which are responsible for the decided odor that develops when cabbage is overcooked. If cabbage is cooked quickly in an open kettle this undesirable feature will be avoided almost entirely and there will be no tendency to discoloration.

"Raw and cooked cabbage differ in their vitamin C content, for heat destroys much of this antiscorbutic vitamin. The loss of this vitamin in heating varies with different vegetables but usually much of it is destroyed in cooking. Some of the soluble substances are left in the liquid after the vegetable is cooked. If this 'pot liquor' is utilized the loss is lessened.

Raw Cabbage Recommended.

"Raw cabbage ranks with orange juice and tomatoes among the richest sources of vitamin C. Fortunately, raw cabbage is a delicious as well as inexpensive food and lends itself to many combination dishes. It can be served as a salad with other vegetables or fruits, or can be chopped fine for sandwiches. Small children, especially, relish raw vegetable sandwiches and, since a deficiency of vitamin C causes irritability, lack of stamina, and retardation of growth, foods which offer a generous supply should be eaten in abundance.

"Green raw cabbage leaves are richer in vitamin A and iron than the white once. The inner cabbage leaves are relatively poor in this vitamin, but it is not destroyed to any serious degree by ordinary cooking. Both vitamin A and C are protective vitamins since they are a defense against nutritional deficiences that are most likely to appear when the diet is composed too largely of grain products, meats, sweets, and fats.

"The other important vitamin found in cabbage is known as B, the antineuritic vitamin that prevents beriberi and stimulates the appetite. This one is more stable than C in cooking."

Many Varieties of Cabbage.

There are many varieties of the cabbage family on the market, chief among which are the common cabbage, kale, collards, brussels sprouts, cauliflower and broccoli. All the others are much more expensive than cabbage, which is unique in the fact that it is to be had throughout the year at reasonable rates. Cauliflower, for instance, is often identified as "the cabbage with a college education." We find when we go to market that the more patrician the variety of cabbage, the higher the cost.

New cabbage is available except for the comparatively brief period from the time of heavy frost until January, when the first shipments begin from the Rio Grande valley of Texas.

Mint Julep Provides Perfect Answer to 'How to Keep Cool'

BY BETTY BROWNING.

Of the nymphs who wandered in the flowery meadows on the shores of the wine dark sea, or up the olive grown slopes of snow-capped Aetna, none was fairer than Mintha. And one spring when Persephone, Pluto's pale queen, had returned once again to Sicily for her brief half-year on earth, she came upon Mintha disporting herself in a grove with her sister nymphs, and in a sudden paroxysm of jealousy transformed her into a plant.

This was the legend which the Greeks wove around the mint 2,500 years ago to explain the graceful curve of its leaves and the pervasive charm of its aromatic spiked flowers.

Other traditions cling about the plant today, traditions dating from the time of our grandmothers, who dedicated the shadiest, dampest corners of their herb gardens to beds of mint.

Mint Sauce and Mint Jelly.

What old fashioned recipe book is without its formula for mint sauce, that piquant accompaniment to tender spring lamb or the more robust leg o' mutton! Mint jelly, too, clearest, greenest, spiciest of jellies, is a time-tested means of enlivening the somber roast.

But it is in the hot days ahead that mint will come into its own. With the warm weather will be revived that most picturesque of American drinks, the mint julep. A mint julep must have inspired that old toast:

"Here's to old Kentucky,
The land where I was born,
Where the corn is full of kernels,
And the colonels full of corn."

The Kentucky colonel who first added a sprig of mint to the mellow Bourbon he was dispensing to his guests on the broad verandah overlooking his blue grass domain was a connoisseur with a nice taste in seasoning. But he was also a practical old chap. Ice was scarce in Kentucky before the war between the states, and our colonel knew that mint would impart coolness and freshness as well as flavor to his drink.

With or Without Alcohol.

What mint did for the Kentuckian's Bourbon, it has since done for beverages north, south, and west, made with or without alcohol. For those without pre-war cellars let it be said that delicious mint julep can be made without a drop of the forbidden ½ per cent. And this post-prohibition mint julep, like the pre-war brand, is the perfect answer to how to keep cool.

Here is a recipe for mint julep which will sustain the reputation of the drink for refreshing hospitality and good cheer without violating the conscience of the most law abiding.

MINT JULEP.

1 cup lemon juice	½ cup water
1 bunch fresh mint	3 pints ginger ale
1½ cups sugar	Ice

Add mint leaves, sugar, and water to lemon juice. Let stand 30 minutes. Pour over a large piece of ice and add ginger ale. Serve in small glasses.

Becomes Full Fledged Industry.

From a modest corner in grandmother's garden, mint growing has expanded into a full fledged industry. More than one-half the world's supply is grown in southwestern Michigan and northwestern Indiana, the major portion in St. Joseph county, Mich. Of the dozen members of the mint family, three are cultivated for commercial purposes. Spearmint is the mint used in cooking. From peppermint is distilled oil of peppermint, used for making candy. Bergamot mint is employed in manufacturing perfumes.

This recipe for mint sauce uses spearmint leaves: Dissolve 1 tablespoon powdered sugar in one-half cup vinegar, pour over one-fourth cup finely chopped mint leaves, and let stand 30 minutes in warm place. If vinegar is very strong, dilute with water.

MINT JELLY.

1½ cups water	1 cup vinegar
Spearmint extract or mint leaves	1 cup liquid pectin
6½ cups sugar	Green coloring

Mix water and vinegar, add coloring, and stir until dissolved. Add sugar and bring to boiling point. Add pectin, boil one minute. Remove from fire and add one to three teaspoonsful spearmint extract, according to flavor desired. Let stand one minute, skim and fill glasses. If fresh mint leaves are used instead of extract, add one cupful to the water and vinegar and remove when skimming jelly. This jelly may be made by using 2½ cups water and the juice of 2 lemons in place of mixture of vinegar and water given above.

FOR THE PICNIC CHOOSE FOODS EASY TO HANDLE

Week-end picnic parties hold no dreads for the housewife who is able to take the foods along that mean the least amount of work in the kitchen or after the party sits down in the shade of the trees.

Home economists of the University of Minnesota have set down a few simple rules on preparing the picnic feast, quite apropos of June weather.

"Some of the meats which give foundation for the lunch," continues the collegiate report, "are ham or meat loaf, jellied ham or chicken or veal, tongue, or other cold sliced meats.

"The meat, egg, or cheese sandwich is a good center for the meal."

Determined Accuracy!

IN the regular order of business 950,000 bills must be sent out each month by your gas company. Ten operations are performed in computing and delivering each bill, making nine million, five hundred thousand opportunities for error. Yet, through the ceaseless vigilance of gas company employes, errors are an almost unknown factor.

The high standard of accuracy maintained by your gas company is no mere happening. In addition to the bonuses paid employes who complete one year's work without error, there is a special error chasing system to trace to its source any error that might occur, so that precautions may be taken to prevent its happening again.

No percentage of error, however small, is considered negligible by The Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company. Nothing short of 100 per cent accuracy is our goal in striving to improve our service to customers.

H. J. Heinz Company spent eight years in perfecting the exclusive process by which cereal-cellulose is added to crisp, delicious flakes. It costs much more to make Heinz Rice Flakes this way. But it costs you no more.

TEXAS BIDS FOR CHANCE TO FILL CHICAGO LARDERS

Housewives Like Lone Star Produce.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Every Chicago housewife has three suitors anxious to hold and control the hand that carries the market basket. But this amorous anxiety deals largely with the profession of growing fresh fruits and vegetables in the states of Florida, Texas, and California during months when similiar produce is out of season in rural sections adjacent to Chicago, the food center of the nation.

Formerly Florida and California competed almost alone for this late fall, winter and early spring trade with green grocers and fruit stores in Chicagoland. Even those states were rather new in the produce growing profession for long distance shipping.

Texas Contributes, too.

They found the business profitable, at least in the majority of years. But now Texas puts forth acreages of tree fruits and cultivated crops that not only add to the variety available in homes and restaurants here, but have lowered the price and bettered the quality.

Last year California shipped 42,696 carloads of fresh eatables to this city. Florida growers shipped 6,713 and Texas, 7,162. Idaho and Wisconsin were the only states except Washington to approach or exceed Texas or Florida in these totals, and that was largely due to the one crop of potatoes in which the northern states specialize. The state of Washington was prominent largely because of its apple crop, much of which is shipped here for consumption or reconsignment to the east.

Figures announced this week by W. H. Hall, fruit and vegetable reporter for the Chicago bureau of the United States department of agriculture, indicated that during the month of May, California remained in the lead with a total of 2,902 carlots arriving here; Texas, 1,273 carloads; and Florida, 596.

Vegetables from Southwest.

Texas at present is largely a source of fresh tomatoes, sweet corn and new potatoes. Florida is shipping grapefruit, mixed citrus, peppers and green beans. California is leading the shipments of cantaloupes, honeydews, cherries, lemons, oranges, peaches, onions, celery and plums and prunes.

According to authorities in the Chicago fruit auction, this rivalry has not attained its peak as yet and prophecies are that the lower cost fresh food products will be even more evident in the next three or four years due to the three-cornered competition between the southern states.

California and Texas are doing much of their development along with irrigation, a handicap with which Florida is not faced. Texas growers usually get into the market slightly later than the other two states, but claim the ability to grow two or even three crops in a season.

Some evidence of over planting was found this spring, according to a Wisconsin grower of truck crops who made a visit to Texas. He is Chris Bach of Racine county, Wis. He found cabbage being sold at such a low price in the field that Texas truck farmers were discouraged and plowed the crop back into the soil rather than accept $3 and $4 per ton.

During 1930 the three states ranked as follows in shipping various commodities to Chicago:

How They Rank.

California was first of all states for receipts here of apricots, cherries, brussel sprouts, anise, artichokes, cantaloupes, celery, chicory, garlic, nectarines, grapes, mixed deciduous, oranges, lemons, honeydews, honeyballs, casabas, mixed melons, avacados, pomegranates, mixed vegetables, carrots, pears, peas, persimmons, mixed fruit, rhubarb, raspberries and plums.

Here is Texas' record: First in total carlots shipped here of broccoli, cabbage, parsley, mustard, greens, limes, beets, onions, green corn, and tomatoes. Florida has not such an imposing list of "firsts" but ranks heavily in the midst of many commodities. Products in which it leads in shipping to Chicago are beans, tangerines, eggplant, grapefruit, mixed citrus, escarole and peppers.

SHEEP ARE TURNED TO GREENS KEEPERS INSTEAD OF MUTTON

Out of the Chicago live stock market last week came happy tidings for Little Bo Peep, who lost her sheep and couldn't tell where to find them.

Bo Peep will find her sheep—at least the aged ones—in increasing numbers grazing leisurely about the wide lawns of country estates and over the turf of golf courses throughout the country, according to provision men. If their tails are not wagging, the merchants say, it is because their dumbness precludes any knowledge of market conditions which are forcing their return to the pastures.

With a falling off in the slaughter house demand for sheep whose advancing years make them undesirable as meat products, the dealers say Bo Peep's charges have virtually become a drug on the market. As a result, they are being sold at what are regarded as ridiculously low prices to owners of estates and to country clubs, where they are turned loose to graze unmolested and thus keep down the grass and weeds.

Provision men assert that utilization of aged sheep for this purpose has spread within the last few months, during which time the price for the animals has fallen from around $4 to $6 a hundred pounds to the present level of $1.50 to $2 a hundred pounds, with few bidders. In comparison, the sheep's younger relatives, lambs and yearlings, are bringing $9 to $9.50 and $7 to $7.50 a hundred pounds, respectively.

Hence, Little Bo Peep's troubles may eventually be solved, and both Bo Peep and her pets may live happily throughout their declining years.

CHINESE TURN FROM SHARK FIN TO YANKEE FOOD

Two Central Westerners Show Them How.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, June 11.—It's an interesting coincidence that two Americans, both of whom were born in the central west, "have been primarily responsible for the introduction of American cookery into China. They are Miss Opal Powell, who comes from Quincy, Ill., and Jimmy James, a native of Jackson, Minn.

Operating in entirely different spheres, these two citizens of middle western United States have revolutionized the breakfast, tiffin [luncheon] and dinner menus of China's chief port of Shanghai, which contains an American and European population of approximately 50,000 and a Chinese population of about three millions. It is not meant to imply that the Chinese suddenly have forsaken their chop sticks, sharks' fins, and roast duck for American style foods, but the influence of these two American experts in cookery has made deep inroads into the Chinese community, particularly among the thousands of Chinese young men and women who studied in America and thus cultivated a taste for foods prepared in the American fashion.

As It Used to Be.

The style of food that was dished up for foreigners on the China coast prior to the arrival of Miss Powell and Jimmy James was difficult of description. According to tradition the first Europeans who landed at Canton, only about twenty years after Columbus discovered America, attempted to teach Chinese cooks how to prepare food in the European fashion. The Europeans were men, not women, hence the dishes they taught their Chinese cooks to prepare were not much to speak of.

In fact it is difficult to discuss the subject dispassionately, because those same dishes taught those Cantonese cooks in the early days of the fifteenth century, were handed dow to later generations of Chinese cooks, who prepared foods for foreigners all along the China coast from Birtain's Hongkong colony to the Japanese port of Dairen on the Manchurian coast.

A Question of Training.

Chinese cooks, admittedly the best in the world when preparing their own style of foods, or when well taught in the foreign fashion, can be the worst in the world when poorly taught. Those at Canton were poorly taught in the beginning and their descendants to the n'th generation continued to be poor cooks up to the arrival of the two aforementioned American food experts.

Miss Powell arrived in the orient about a dozen years ago equipped with a diploma which stated that she had been graduated from the University of Missouri and had specialized in the subject of foods and their preparation. In other words she was a "dietitian" and shortly after landing in Shanghai obtained a position as dietitian with an American sanitarium. It wasn't long before her skill in the preparation of foods spread up and down the China coast.

It was rumored that supposedly healthy persons became "ill" so as to be able to partake of her scientifically prepared menus at Dr. Fearn's sanitarium.

She Feeds Clubmen.

Later on the sanitarium closed and Miss Powell gravitated into Shanghai club life, serving as dietitian for the American club, where American business men make their headquarters and the Columbia Country club, where a considerable portion of Shanghai's foreign population goes for recreation.

Fitting up model kitchens that resembled laboratories, Miss Powell literally took the Chinese cooks by the back of their necks and showed them how foods should be prepared in the "proper" American fashion. Her efforts were crowned with success and it wasn't long before Shanghai housewives were sending their cooks to Miss Powell for a course of training. Finally a local American newspaper in China enlisted her services as the writer of a daily column on food, consisting chiefly of menus and how to give them the living touch.

Jimmy James' Start.

Now all up and down the China coast and even in Japan the fame of Miss Powell's menus have spread and have been responsible for little domestic revolutions in thousands of European households throughout the orient.

As for Jimmy James, he operated in a different, but equally important sphere. James came to the orient as a rear rank private in the Fifteenth U. S. infantry, stationed at Tientsin. At the completion of his enlistment period, Jimmy drifted down the coast to Shanghai and started a lunch counter. Where he learned to cook is not stated, but "Jimmy's" place soon became known as the best lunch counter in Shanghai, where one could obtain "hot cakes and," first class coffee and rolls, a properly prepared steak, or what have you. Jimmy prospered and after a time added another restaurant and soon had a chain.

Now, if one wishes to "dine out" in Shanghai, one naturally gravitates to Jimmy's, where real "American" food may be obtained in any style one may desire from "southern cookery" to New England "boiled dinners."

Three years ago Jimmy married, and last year with his family, including twin daughters, made a trip around the world. The local newspapers printed an item, "Jimmy James, local restaurant magnate, accompanied by his family, departed this week on a tour of the world, including Minnesota."

AMERICAN APPETITE FOR BUTTER SHOWS A GAIN EACH YEAR

Each year, with minor variations, sees an increase in the American appetite for butter, according to figures compiled by the federal bureau of agricultural economics. The per capita consumption of butter is now about 15 pounds yearly. A total annual consumption of more than two billion pounds of creamery butter is now credited to the United States.

A LITTLE AT A TIME MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD IN FLAVOR! IN AROMA! AND THAT'S THE SECRET OF HILLS BROS' PATENTED, CONTINUOUS PROCESS . . . CONTROLLED ROASTING

IF THERE is any basic secret in the preparation of food, it is to cook small quantities at a time rather than huge lots. Then you can control every step and turn out a dish that's perfect.

Hills Bros. apply this cooking rule to the roasting of their famous coffee blend with amazing success. For, by roasting only a few pounds at a time, they are able to exercise perfect control in the flavor development of every berry. Such control is not possible when coffee is roasted in bulk.

Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh whenever and wherever you buy it. The secret is in the fact that Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum. This process removes air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, from the can and keeps it out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh.

Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

OLIVE ORCHARDS IN U. S. CHIEFLY IN CALIFORNIA

Production About Doubled in Last Decade.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The food tastes of Mediterranean nations, tempered with ample amounts of olive oil, have been transferred to a lesser degree into American dining habits.

The particular dishes which seem to require oil of the olive in preparation, however, have gained a foothold in new world customs rivaling that which the olive itself claims. Green, ripe, large or small, stuffed with pimento or other condiment, the "fruit" is more in favor each year.

The commercial production of olives in the United States is virtually confined to California. No other states have been able to encroach on its olive growing as they have in the production of citrus fruits and many kinds of vegetables.

K. R. Wellman, economics specialist in the Giannini foundation at the California university in Berkeley, has just reported a study of the development of this crop in its American field. In the last four years, he finds, an average of 58 per cent of the commercial production has been used for canning or bottling, 36 per cent pressed for its oil content, and but 6 per cent shipped fresh or dried.

California Official Reports.

"California produces only a very small part of the edible olive oil used in this country," Mr. Wellman reports. "During the last nine years about 16 per cent of the edible oil consumed in the United States was imported, mainly from Italy, Spain, and France."

In the last decade the production of California's olive orchards have almost doubled, until last year 20,000 tons of the fruit provided a farm value of $1,400,000, the federal department of agriculture finds. Mr. Wellman anticipates little expansion in the next few years, however.

"Plantings of olives during recent years," he says, "have been small. Most of the acreage of Mission and Ascolano olives is now at about the age of full bearing. On the other hand, only about one-third of the acreage of large type olives—Sevillano, Ascolano, and Barounl—is in full bearing. Practically all of the increase in total production during the next few years will, therefore, be in the large olives used mainly for canning."

Americans Prefer Them Ripe.

Americans seem to prefer ripe to green olives, if the demands of recent years are any criterion. There was a time a few years ago when the demand was being comfortably met, but of late an overproduction has accumulated. Little decline in prices to consumers has resulted, according to the California university report.

"At the present time approximately 75 per cent of the canned ripe olives are consumed in the Pacific coast states, which contain only 6.7 per cent of the nation's population," Mr. Wellman states. "The possibility of expanding the markets for ripe olives is apparently very great."

Stretching away through the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys are great forests of olive orchards, where over four-fifths of the nation's olive trees are found. More than 25,000 acres of these trees are located north of Tehachapi.

The growers pick and haul the olives to central grading and packing sheds, where standard size grades have been established to govern the number of olives to the pound and size.

How They Are Graded.

There are about 113 olives, on the average, in a pound of the "medium" grade, which constitute about 27 per cent of the output. Almost one-third of all ripe olives from California are "small and midgets." The "giants," "jumbos," and "colossals" comprise but 11 per cent. Hence their rarity establishes a premium when one seeks them on the local store shelf.

Of the imported olives, almost 90 per cent come from Spain, the balance being shipped from Italy and Greece, over half of them being green olives, and another third being the pitted and stuffed assortments.

"Although imported green olives differ radically in taste and food value from California canned ripe olives," concludes Mr. Wellman, "they probably compete to some extent, since they both are used as a relish. Among those people who are familiar with both types of olives the consumption of green olives probably precludes the consumption of as many ripe olives as would otherwise be consumed, and vice versa. The type that is used appears to depend largely upon taste and habit and to only a minor extent upon price."

KITCHEN SINK TOO LOW? RAISE IT AND BACKACHES VANISH

Long, weary hours over kitchen sinks, stoves, and tables may be reduced by taking a few simple precautions, according to Miss Thelma Beall, extension specialist in home economics at the Ohio State university.

Many women have tired backs or round shoulders from working at surfaces that are too low, she says. These surfaces are easily adjusted so that the homemaker may be comfortable at her work.

Although changing the height of the sink involves considerable expense, the condition may be remedied by using a rack of wooden slats in the sink or on the drain board to raise the working surface. Tables may be raised by putting casters or blocks on the legs.

NATURAL THINS REAL SUFFERERS IN WAR ON FAT

They Listen as Calories Are Counted Aloud.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Counting calories! A noble process for our more corpulent sisters who find so much difficulty in abstaining from those dangerous pleasures in food. Yet what a bore for the dinner partners who must listen to these representatives of the fairer sex extol their self-control as they chew a dry crust thirty times, decline the lure of saucy asparagus on buttery toast, and even turn a cold shoulder on the blushing appeal of strawberries and cream!

Yes, a lover of good things in life turned ascetic deserves her share of approval, even in these days when fashion decrees the curve quite permissible. But before you become guilty of excess in admiration, remember that the stout heroine is indulging in a luxury more appealing than the taste of broiled live lobster, namely, the pleasure of broadcasting her own deprivations, her own solutions of diet and food values.

Becomes Game of Voices.

If only fat women [I hesitate to use the term] would resign themselves to remaining fat or decide to grow thin gracefully and unobtrusively! But alas, reducing and the methods employed is their subject of conversation, lightly or seriously treated, at the breakfast table, the midday repast, the tea party, or the formal dinner! It becomes a game as shrill voices proclaim the number of points shed during the last week, with the contestants scoring only by their losses! On no occasion is it practiced more than at the luncheon party, where truly the great majority are so occupied in counting calories that another subject of conversation can scarcely find a listening ear.

Take heed, however, you mortifiers of the flesh if you have a robust, exuberant spirit! For what is worse than a jolly good temperament striving to live in an emaciated frame. Certainly Falstaff's rich nature would have thinned if subjected to the process of calorie counting. There is one glory of the fat and another glory of the thin, but there is no glory for the woman, be she justified or not, who is in the process of becoming thin.

It's Change That's Bad.

Fat people who are willing to remain fat we enjoy having about us. They are usually placid, good natured, pleasant company. And naturally thin people are quite as good company having the characteristics of their angles. They supply smart witticisms, intelligent and pointed conversation. But how tiresome, how selfcentered is the woman on a reducing régime, and how fast she is becoming ubiquitous!

Just suppose that all the thin women organized into a union, as the stout seem unofficially to have done for the purpose of increasing their respective weights. Suppose then, they talked about it all of the time, delighted in cream, craved starches and found the epitome of satisfaction in rich gravies and sauces. All of the fat folk would, in turn, rise in their might and proclaim the would-be-stouts gross and disgusting. The weight of public opinion would undoubtedly be with the heavier battalion. On the same score, the subject of how to resolve one's excessive pounds into a mere nothing becomes quite as boring as a matter of dinner table conversation!

A Peculiar Psychology.

There's a peculiar psychology in this whole matter of reducing, too, for how much simpler it is to do a few of these errands on foot and to pass up the ever groaning tea table than to subject one's self to a course of semi-starvation and violent gymnastics. Yet discover the woman who does not find more heroism in using the dumbbells and gymnastic gimcracks in an orgy of concentrated exercise than in tempering her gastronomic desires with timely discretion!

Fortunate it is that man, when he is fat, seldom makes any visible effort to grow thinner. And how much more agreeable a dinner companion he is than his panting, banting sister who discusses carbohydrates, proteins and caseins until conversation becomes a "reductio ad absurdum."

Homemakers' Hints

Stale bread may be ground as it accumulates and stored in a screw top glass jar for the stuffing of a fowl, for bread pudding or other such attractive dishes.

Brown sugar which has caked and hardened in a damp pantry may be softened by a few minutes in a warm oven, or in a pan over a low flame.

If you do not know what caused the stain on the garment, the first thing to try is cold water; cold water may or may not remove the stain but will not tend to set it.

ON IRONING DAY USE THE HEAT OF OVEN TO COOK

The job of preparing meals on those warm June days can be made easier by using the heat of the oven on ironing day, or in the cool of the morning, say specialists in home economics at the Ohio State university, who believe that it is not always necessary to cook a meal immediately before it is served.

One appetizing meal that may be prepared while the homemaker is attending to other kitchen tasks, they say, might consist of baked pork chops, baked potatoes, baked squash, baked apples, with bread and butter, and a beverage. If the children are too young to eat pork chops, an egg might be baked for each of them, and the food needs of the entire family met.

Meat hash with scalloped tomatoes, entire wheat bread, canned pears and cookies, with milk for children, and either milk or tea for adults, makes another meal easily prepared for which the heat of the oven can be utilized.

If the homemaker wishes to attend some afternoon or evening meeting or social affair, one of these meals may be prepared in advance. They require very little preparation at the time of serving.

FIT FOR A KING IS MENU SERVED ON ROYAL VISIT

Chef Tells How Meal Was Prepared.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Ever since the eighteenth amendment ax separated Americans from the better class of beverages, dining has been more important than wining, of the two ancient verbs connoting hospitality. At least, in so far as public functions are concerned.

Thus, when it happened recently that Chicago was host to two eminent representatives of the oldest reigning dynasty of the civilized world, the absence of those graceful, gracious small rites customary with less restricted and perhaps more sober nations inevitably centered attention on the gustatory phase of the official courtesies extended. There, at least, was no cause for criticism.

A Meal for His Highness.

It was literally a menu fit for a king that graced the dinner given by the Japan American society at the Palmer house in honor of their imperial highnesses, Prince Takamatsu and his bride, Princess Kikuko. Yet, paradoxically, it was comparatively a simple meal.

Such formality marked the occasion as seldom before has flourished in our democratic midst. Certainly not in the days when Edward VII., then prince of Wales, was ushered to a balcony by "Long John" Wentworth, who smiled on the crowd in the street below and roared:

"Boys, this is the prince of Wales. He's come to see us, and I'm going to show him around. Prince," with a wave of his long arm, "these are the boys!"

As the years passed other sovereigns and scions included Chicago on their itineraries when they set out to see the world, which they did with increasing frequency. Fête after fête went into the chapters of civic progress, some of exceptional brilliance. Belief in the divine right of kings was steadily diminishing, however, and with it went much of the trappings of royalty. If anything, the visitors seemed glad to see it go.

Royalty Goes Democratic.

Edward of Windsor candidly elected to shelve the more restrained forms of social activities in favor of those in which he could enjoy himself with congenial company, dancing or swimming or driving. Her majesty of Rumania was notably gracious to all and sundry, and Prince Wilhelm of Sweden much preferred the elimination from his schedules of anything that smacked of court routine.

It so happened, however, that the arrival of the grave faced brother of the emperor Hirohito and his youthful princess coincided with a return to favor of the dignified fashions of former days. Affairs planned for them were keyed to the reserved, somewhat aloof conduct of the couple, and there was no suggestion of a flippant manner. That they took themselves and their responsibilities with the utmost gravity was patent.

All this blended naturally into a near approach to a royal levee, in the Red Lacquer room of the hotel where the guests gathered for the reception preceding the dinner.

Formality at Its Height.

Feminine costumes reflected every tint of the spectrum, lending height to their wearers by the lengthy, draped skirts, and elegance with the touch of long kid gloves and fresh flowers complementing a collection of the finest jewels in the city, if not in the country. Masculine fronts were aglitter with orders worn with less self-consciousness because of the formality that marked the evening.

There was a time when nothing less than a festive board heaped with the fruits of nearly a score of courses would have been considered the fit and proper accompaniment to such an occasion. But something vastly different was ordined by the power behind the swinging doors of the Palmer house kitchens—M. Ernest E. Amiet, veteran of years of field marshaling such repasts, not infrequently for nobility.

The Royal Menu.

Here is the menu prepared and served for 600 persons by this chef:

Lobster Tyrolienne
Clear Green Turtle Soup
Supreme of Domestic Duck En
Sealed Casserole Imperial Chiffonade Salade
Savarin of Fresh Fruits
Demi Tasse

Viewed in comparison with some of the menus that have come down to us from historic feasts spread for earlier aristocratic visitors, it looks almost meager. Actually it was a full, smooth, smart meal, both in perfection of preparation and celerity of service.

There was the lobster of the first course, its tangy, pinkish white meat garnished with slices of hard boiled egg and ripe olive, served in its shell. Tender portions of the meat had been removed, mixed with the sauce Tyrolienne, then put back carefully in the identical shell. With it was passed boats of the sauce, made as follows:

Sauce Tyrolienne for lobster: Pass the stomach part of a lobster through a sieve, then mix with one cup mayonnaise, one tablespoon tomato paste, two tablespoons tomato catsup, a few finely cut chives, and one tablespoon Tarragon vinegar.

Wafers Are Simple.

Simple wafers accompanied the clear green turtle soup, which was prepared with the minimum of seasoning to assure palatability to every taste.

The pièce de résistance was the duck, brought to the table in the casserole in which it was cooked, each one heavily coated with pastry over top and sides. Waiters sank their serving knives into the dough around the lid and removed the cover, releasing a cloud of steam. It is the steam, Chef Amiet explained, which gives the superior flavor to the fowl.

As a subtle compliment to the guests of honor each breast of duck was stuffed with edibles reminiscent of their own land. There was wild rice, blanched raisins, white grapes, mushrooms, and celery wrapped in lettuce leaves.

"First wrap the short lengths of celery in the lettuce," Chef Amiet details the process of preparing the duck. "Then line the bottom of the casserole with them. Next arrange the wild rice—just boiled and mixed with the raisins—in a pyramid in the vessels. Then the white grapes.

"Next the eight breasts of duck, which have been sautéd in butter, are arranged around the top of the pyramid of rice. Over that goes the mushrooms, which have been fried in butter. Then we pour over it all a little of the duck gravy, made from the carcass of the duck, and cover. A heavy dough made of water and flour is then pressed down over the top and sides so no steam can escape, and ten minutes in the oven has it ready for the table."

And Then the Salad.

An unpretentious salad is the chiffonade. It is made of lettuce, julienned and mixed with a dressing put together simply enough for almost any one. Here it is:

Foundation French dressing: 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, a teaspoon sugar, 8 tablesspoons pure vinegar, 1 pint olive oil. Mix salt, sugar, and paprika and add vinegar and oil gradually and beat thoroughly. Chiffonade dressing: Add to foundation recipe 3 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 2 hard boiled eggs chopped, and ½ cup chopped red beets.

The savarin of fresh fruits, a circular mold of miraculously fluffy cake centered with mixed fresh fruits, looked deceptively easy to concoct. Actually they were more complex than they seemed.

The cakes, reveals the chef, were baked a day ahead in the same way as coffee cake is made, using yeast, and were permitted to harden. Ten minutes before being sent to the table they were dipped quickly into a sizzling hot liquid made of sugar water combined with a preparation known as "rum cup." When thoroughly soaked they were placed on grills to drain. The result was a fairy lightness of texture.

The fresh fruits, including all those in season, such as strawberries, oranges, pineapple, pears, and so forth, were then heaped into the center of each cake. The liquid in which the cakes had been dipped was then strained, recooked, and orange and lemon peel added, with almonds. The warm sauce was passed at the tables as the cakes were sliced, and poured over the dessert.

And the distinguished company assembled drank the toast demanded by court etiquette, in nothing more bracing than the Lake Michigan vintage of H2O.

Food Needs of a Growing Child Told by Specialist

"If the child receives each day plenty of milk, whole grain products, fresh fruit, and green vegetables with his other foods the parent can be reasonably sure that he is receiving foods which are necessary for the well nourished child," declares Ruth M. Dawson, nutrition specialist of the North Dakota Agricultural college. "Recent surveys have proved that undernourishment is not always the result of underfeeding, but rather of fatigue, lack of sleep, and wrong food habits brought about by unintelligent feeding."

It should be the first duty of every mother to see that her growing child has at least a quart of milk each day. From it he receives calcium in large enough amounts to supply the needs of his body—the building and maintaining of bone and tooth structures—as well as easily digested proteins, sugar, fats, phosphorus salts, and vitamins. If he dislikes milk there are always the foods made from it—cheese, ice cream or milk deserts, beverages, soups, creamed dishes, all valuable because of the good qualities they carry with them from milk.

Whole grain cereals contain both body building and energy producing substances and should be included in the child's diet twice a day in some form, preferably as a cooked cereal or as bread. The germ of the grain is rich in vitamins, especially vitamin G, the growth promoting vitamin. The outer coat contains calcium and phosphorus, as well as bulk or roughage.

Children should have at least three vegetables a day, one of which should be potato and some form of green vegetable as lettuce, spinach, chard, or cabbage. Fruit should be served once a day and preferably twice. Citrus fruit, such as oranges, grapefruit, o rtomatoes, may be used every other day. These, along with plenty of sunshine, help to deposit the mineral elements firmly in place and thus prevent rickets and decay of teeth.

The big rivers of the United States are not likely to flood this coming winter, for streams are lower and drier than they have been in several decades.

TIRED BUSINESS WOMAN COOKS HER OWN DINNER

Leans Heavily on Canned Foods and Chops.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

And who will cook dinner for the tired business woman? Why, she will, of course. And she does. But what?

Canned beans and canned corn; canned milk and soup, all in a row with an oasis perhaps in the way of crabmeat or chicken a la king; packages of cheese crackers and soda biscuits. It's too bad butter doesn't come in cans.

And out of these with a few additions from the corner delicatessen or fruit store—the one that stays open after 6 o'clock—she'll turn out a meal—not like mother used to make— but perhaps better.

Ice Box Her Best Friend.

The ice box is her best friend—next to the cupboard of the canned. And she is learning more and more short cuts to a good meal. Perhaps she leans a little heavy on the steaks and chops—for company service, anyway, but sometimes she even goes in for raised rolls and home made cookies—via the ice box.

There are any number of cookies that may be mixed of a Sunday morning when the tired business man is out getting in his 18 holes and even rolls may be mixed and set away to be brought out several days later, allowed to raise a short time and then baked.

For men who talk of the inefficiency of the housewife there is the double duty housewife for refutation, who works her hours at the office and then comes home to change her dress and her temperament into that of the busy chief cook and bottle washer.

No Careful Planning.

And for her there can be none of this careful planning usually suggested by the man of the house as the way to make a primrose path out of home duties.

She may decide to have an elaborate meal and then have to work an hour overtime. If she peels her potatoes in the morning, who can tell but what she may not be able to get home for dinner at all.

Generally speaking, she'll go easy on the potatoes anyway, because she doesn't like to peel them and she wants to buy a new frock that is a wee bit too tight for her now. Canned potatoes would, of course, be a solution to one-half of her difficulty. But they are hard to find on the market.

And so it will be lamb chops and fresh peas tonight if times are lush, or hamburger and canned corn if times are bad and the time is short.

Boil Potatoes in Jacket.

Salads that take little time to prepare such as lettuce, with or without sliced tomatoes, canned asparagus salad or canned pineapple are among her favorites. Potatoes boiled in the jackets or baked if there are other things to prepare and time enough to cook them thoroughly, will be chosen if potatoes are on the menu.

Steak, the most expensive cuts, if they fit in with the budget, or round steak pounded with flour and sauteed, if it needs stretching, pork chops and lamb chops of any variety come within her ken of the non-canned meats.

Sometimes she will open a can of crabmeat and serve it a la Newburg; or a can of steak and onions, if she has that on her shelf; canned chicken and ham and other varieties of meat usually are in her larder.

Desserts and Relishes.

For desserts whipped cream in various combinations with pineapple and marshmallows, with raspberries, canned or fresh, with chocolate cookies or ladyfingers make up quickest and so are among the favorites.

Appetizers and relishes come out of bottles for most housewives anyway, and there is always the bakery if she hasn't time to mix up some rolls or fill out for dessert.

Many Tempting Ways to Prepare Bacon, Favorite Breakfast Meat

BY FLORA MARTIN.

There's only one way to start the day off right and that's with a good meal. One of the indispensable parts of a hearty and appetizing breakfast is bacon cooked to suit the taste. Other meats such as ham, salt pork, and pork sausages come in for honorable mention as breakfast meats, but are by no means popular enough to threaten to steal the laurels won by bacon as a breakfast dish.

Eating bacon for breakfast comes almost as a second nature to most of us. It's nine chances to one that few of us would be able to give a specific reason for doing so, other than that, victims of habit as we are, we were started out on bits of bacon when we were hardly out of the cradle, and, without giving it a second thought, we have taken its presence on the breakfast table as a matter of course.

Builds Up Vitality.

Foods that have to be eaten because they are considered healthful and nourishing generally lose their charm. But in bacon we are unwittedly eating a food that builds up our vitality and creates new energy. If at all familiar with the diets outlined by child specialists, you will find that bacon is one of the foods that is highly recommended for small tots of a year or more.

A cook has her hands full when she starts cooking bacon to suit the tastes of all of the members of a large family. One might like it in thin slices, another wants it in thick cuts. As for the cooking, some like it soft and tender, others want it crisp, while many favor it being cooked until it is very brittle and almost burnt.

Bake it, broil it or fry it, whichever you will, but do it right. In broiling, place slices of bacon on a wire rack over a dripping pan to save the fat. Broil under a hot fire, and when one side of the bacon is delicately browned, turn and brown the other side. To bake, set strips of bacon in a shallow pan and cook in a hot oven 400 degrees F.

When Ready to Serve.

In frying place slices of cold bacon in a cold frying pan over a low fire and cook slowly. Turn frequently, increasing the heat. When the bacon is crisp and brown it is ready to serve. In both the baking and frying pour off the excess fat from time to time.

In your delight over the use of bacon as a breakfast food don't overlook other opportunities of using it in dressing up and adding flavor to other foods. Take baked beans, for instance. Strips of bacon can be substituted for the salt pork which is usually used as a flavoring in the homemade product. Or, with the canned baked beans, place the beans in a casserole, cover with slices of bacon, and heat in oven for about twenty minutes. If you like them dry bake longer.

Cheese Toast with Bacon.

The bacon drippings also can be used in many ways. Most people at some time during their lives have eaten bread flavored with hot bacon fat or used the hot drippings on pancakes as a substitute for sirup. The drippings, provided they are not from smoked bacon, may also be substituted for shortening in pastry and cake recipes. When substituting for shortening in cakes, cookies, or muffins use half as much drippings as butter called for. In pastry for meat pies, baking powder biscuits, or in bread use same amount as shortening called for.

For luncheon we have cheese toast with bacon. To serve six people fry one-half pound of bacon until delicately browned. Make a sauce of four tablespoons of bacon drippings, four tablespoons flour, and two cups of milk. Season with ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika (or ½ teaspoon peppery sauce), and stir in 2-3 cup of grated cheese. Cook about two minutes, or until the cheese is melted. Pour over six slices of toast and place two or three slices of bacon on each slice of toast.

Or an appetizer can be made by wrapping a strip of bacon around a large stuffed olive. Skewer with a toothpick. Broil until bacon is crisp and golden brown. Serve on rounds of toast.

PREPARING A FOREIGN DISH

Mrs. Haysoon Kang of 2748 Hampden court prepares a Corean meal. Mrs. Kang is wearing a typical Corean costume.

COREANS COOKS FOR CENTURIES; RECIPES GIVEN

Resembles That of Japan and China.

BY META GIVEN.

Real cookery is learned by precept and example, experience and practice. All the better the precept and example, the less experience and practice necessary to become skillful. The trouble of us are better at imitating than we are at experimenting and that is why people who are apprentices of expert cooks are often more accomplished performers in the kitchen than those who study cookery as a science.

Corean women have had much precedent and example, for there are few countries with an older civilization. It is said 4,364 years ago since Dan Goon, a man of unknown origin whose name means a prince from under the sandal tree, brought the first settlers to Corea.

Woman Is Korean Authority.

Corean foods resemble Chinese and Japanese foods. But the preparation and the names are very different. Mrs. Haysoon Kang, who is the source of my information on Corean foods and cookery, was born in Kyoung Book Do, Jong, Corea. She says Corean foods differ from those of China in that they contain much less fat and that their meals and vegetables differ from those of Japan in that they do not contain sugar. But about the same vegetables and meats and seasonings are used in all three countries.

Rice is the chief starchy food used. Bread is unknown on Corean bills of fare, but unlike China potatoes are eaten to a small extent as a side dish. Tea and rice water are the chief beverages. Coffee and chocolate are never used and it is only within the last few years that milk has been consumed.

Fat, beef, and chicken are important meats and fish is one of the most important articles of diet. Seaweed is there in staple and this with the abundant fish provided, prevents the Coreans from being a victim of goiter.

Soup is one of the most common food articles. It is eaten at both the evening and noon meal and a great variety exists. Fish meat and vegetables enter into their combinations.

Soup Made of Seaweed.

One celebrated soup called May Yuk Kook is made of seaweed and meat or dried shrimp. This soup appears constantly in all Corean diets, but it is included regularly on menus for nursing mothers. It is thought to have the particular virtue of increasing the flow of mothers' milk and stimulating the circulation.

Another favorite soup and one in general use is Mahn Doo Kook, which means stuffed dumpling soup. A dough resembling our pie crust dough is rolled out, cut, and stuffed with a filling of meat or chicken and vegetables and seasonings. Then these dumplings are boiled in a soup stock. This nutritious soup is favored especially on winter time menus.

Another food that every Corean eats is kimchee. It is a salt pickled vegetable mixture whose preparation resembles that of our dill pickles. Vinegar is not an essential in this particular pickle. Celery cabbage is the most common main ingredient of kimchee. The entire leaf is cut into crosswise strips about 3 or 4 inches long. These pieces are soaked over night in salt water, washed in clear water the next morning, and put into a stoneware crock.

Yang Nyum (the seasoning), which consists of chopped red pepper, green onions, ginger root, salt, and enough water to cover, is added. This is left to stand three or four days, until it becomes like a pickle, when it is ready for use. A more elaborate kimchee called Tong Kimchee is made of the whole celery cabbage stalk or head. The leaves of the head are opened up slightly, are washed, and then soaked in salt water, washed, then stuffed with a filling of white radish and yang nyum. White radishes and cucumbers may be used in place of the celery cabbage to make kimchee.

Mrs. Kang supplies the following recipes for food that are well known and regularly consumed in Corea. All of the unusual foods or seasonings may be bought in Chinese stores and a number of them in Italian or Greek stores.

MAHN DOO KOOK.

¾ lb. bean curd.
1 small dry onion.
2 cloves.
2 teaspoons salt
Dash pepper.
3 tablespoons soy sauce.

Put meat through a food chopper and chop vegetables fine with a knife. Combine meat and vegetables and add seasoning. Make a dough like plain pastry dough with water, flour, and salt. Roll dough out thin. Cut out in four inch circles. Put two tablespoonsful meat-vegetable mixture on each circle and spread it out over half the round. Fold over the other half and crimp the edges of the dough neatly and firmly together to give the dumpling the appearance of a shell. Put dumplings into boiling chicken soup and cool about thirty minutes. Yield: Six servings.

Plain Corean Steak.

Purchase a piece of round steak or beef tenderloin sliced about one-half inch thick. Cut into rectangles about 2x3 inches. Pound steak well, but not so much that it will not hold together. Add yang nyum consisting of a little pounded garlic, soy sauce, salt, and gai. Mix and spread over the surface of each piece as one would spread flour. Put sesame oil (hydrogenated fat or salad oil will do) into a frying pan. When fat is sizzling hot lay the steak in. Turn every minute to sear both sides quickly, then reduce heat and cook to the desired stage—rare, medium, or well done. It will take only three or four minutes' cooking because the meat is cut thin. Garnish with shredded cooked egg, green onions, and red peppers.

Salads.

Salads are made of both cooked and raw vegetables. Bean sprouts, spinach, watercress, lettuce, and cabbage are some of the most common vegetables used in cooked salads. The large leaved and stemmed vegetables are cut into small pieces. To preserve the color the green vegetables are cooked in an open kettle and until tender and no longer. The cooked, well drained leaves are mixed with yang nyum jang, which is made of soy sauce, sesame seed oil, some pounded garlic, pepper, salt, and vinegar. And those who desire a very hot flavor use a little cayenne pepper.

NANG MYUN.
[Cold Noodle Soup.]

Make a good rich broth of chicken, mushrooms and green onions. [Beef or pork may be used instead of chicken.] Leave the chicken whole while boiling in the soup. When it is tender take it out, remove meat from the bones and shred. Mix the shredded meat with yang nyum jang made of soy sauce, gai, pepper and a little pounded garlic. In the meantime boil some dried noodles in a separate kettle in plain boiling salted water. Drain the noodles and put them into soup bowls. Add the cool soup broth and on the top of the noodles put some kimchee, on the kimchee put the shredded chicken. Garnish with shredded egg and green onions. On very hot days a piece of ice may be put into the soup. On cool days it may be served hot.

"GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS"

What Is a Good Time Charliegram?

A Good Time Charliegram is a sentence of exactly ten words which conveys a timely message of good cheer or sound advice:

"Every time you buy something you help bring back prosperity."
"The time to stock up is when prices are low."

Real Devotees of Art Exhibit at This Show

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The most touching exhibit now is on view in the Walden book shop, Diana Court building. The pictures and sculpture are the work of the little Greek and Mexican and Italian children who are taught once a week in Hull house. Back of these paintings and back of this modeling lies a series of tragic events that makes the beauty these children have concocted out of their dark surroundings the more extraordinary. The neighborhood about Hull house is somber.

The children have no recourse from their home except the street. They are being brought up in an atmosphere of sordid crime which to hear carefully retold is to make your heart cringe within you. Can this be possible?

For instance, one little boy, one of the most obviously talented, has two older brothers in the reformatory.

In the family also are this boy of 12, a girl of 16, and a younger girl of 8. The second most talented child comes from like unfavorable circumstances. Yet these two children—George Mendis and John Crissie—have to an unusual extent the power of creating beauty vivid and alive.

The little Crissie boy was taken recently to the aquarium and came home and did a series of the most lovely, most unique, most alive fish studies it is possible for a child to do. They will surprise you as they did me. Last week that boy with a gang of irresponsible friends stole an automobile and he is now in the reformatory. All he cries for there is "my paints and some paper."

The other lad, George Mendis, has aroused through his painting enough public interest for him to be sent this summer from his home environment down to a farm in Kentucky for three months. There is great hope that the change will be good for him and that perhaps on his return things may be arranged that he will get a better home.

The children's little pictures are being sold at a very modest price and the money kept for them. A group of them were brought to the exhibit and noticed the stars that tagged their work and asked what they were. The stars mark the pictures that are sold, they were told. "Sold!" cried the children. "For how much?"

"For two dollars," answered the gentleman in charge.

One little boy fell back in a chair, overcome. "Jesu, Marie," he muttered. None of the children could believe that their work was worth two dollars or any price whatever.

The exhibit has aroused so much interest that it is being sent to Milwaukee, Detroit, Boston and New York, among other American cities, and it is then going to tour Europe, having been especially invited by the cities of Vienna, Paris, Munich and Berlin. The torch that Hull house lights burns far, you see, but public approval and help will do a great deal for some of these youngsters.

Doris Talks Plainly to Married Woman Who Flirts with Boy

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I have the usual problem of a married woman. I have been married eleven years and have one little girl. Recently my brother brought a young man to our house. He's 24. I'm 30. He seemed to be a wonderful boy. Had ideal manners with women.

"He is a student, but works part time. Well, he made a play for me and I fell hard for him. When he needed any books he called up and asked me to please get them for him, which I did without question. I have lent him money, too.

"Recently he was taken ill, so I went to his apartment with some dainties, but there was a girl there ahead of me who claims to be this young man's girl. Aren't men the deceitful cads, though, using some one just for a convenience? He even threatened to break up my home, which might easily have happened.—WORRIED."

Men the deceitful cads? How about women like you? I don't like your saying that you have the "usual problem" of a married woman. It's no such problem. Thank heavens, the usual married woman has more sense than to take on one of these tame cats whose common habit is to turn out to be a regular scratcher.

Leaving aside all sense of marital obligations, does it make a prepossessing picture when a mature woman goes in for absorbing a boy student's affections? What can she expect except to be treated as a mother or older sister of whom indulgences might reasonably be asked?

No, "Worried," you just belong to a limited group of wives whose vanity must be fed at all costs. And if you run amuck, romantically speaking, you're getting what is coming to you. It's no great trick of conquest to enmesh a youth, temporarily, if you supply him with books and cash and dainties for his ailing days.

It is, in fact, just a silly exhibition of a woman who wants to reinforce herself about her captivating charms. And because the game is not on the level the rewards can hardly be expected to measure up to more than you yourself have experienced.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Better Make Up.

"Dear Miss Blake: My former boy friend says he loves me and wants to make up. Please advise.

"PUZZLED."

It's for you to decide. If he still has an appeal for you, it would seem the thing to do.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Jimmie, 5 years of age, who had never been to the country, and had seen chickens only in the butcher shop, was taken for a ride through the rural district. Seeing some ducks swimming in a pond, he cried: "Look at the steamboat chickens!" B. G.

Jack had two hens and believed that he was going to make spending money raising chickens. Just as one hen was ready to set on a nest of eggs she died.

Jack said mournfully to his father, "Well, Dad, the depression that got into the stock market got into my chicken business, too." K. W.

Attractive Frock of Blue Georgette

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Achieving dignified chic becomes a serious problem to the expectant mother, when the thermometer climbs toward the boiling point and the swathing cloaks and capes of winter must be laid aside.

Paris couturiers are doing a number of things to their new clothes that make this problem easy: lowering waistlines, softly draping bodices, widening sleeves and armholes and lengthening tunic draperies on skirts.

Other style points in favor of the expectant mother are the smartness of flat surfaced materials—georgettes, marocains, voiles, and so on—that have a slenderizing effect because they flatten [visually] the curves of the figure, that are on the contrary accentuated by shining silks and satins.

The Martial et Armand afternoon apron frock, sketched today is just the thing for the expectant mother, though it was not designed especially for her. It is in navy blue georgette [and navy blue is a slim appearing color] worn with a blouse of white georgette, trimmed with lines of handwork in navy blue silk. The juxtaposition of blue and white in the bodice helps the lines of the figure. The low waistline is also flattering and it can be adjusted by the apron sash ends that may be tied tightly or more loosely in the back.

The turned back apron tunic, made full by unpressed plaits on either side [one or two of which may be let out, if necessary] lends height to the figure and its diagonal line, added to its fullness, goes far toward keeping the proportions of the figure looking normal. The fullness of the lower sleeves balances this full tunic. The shoulder flower of blue and white georgette may be removed if it is not becoming.

Need Less Food Than Our Forbears, for We Do Less, Says Doctor

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Why we can and should get along with less food than our forbears is a subject treated in a magazine article by Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor of Stanford university.

To put the reason briefly, it is due to the reduction of muscular effort to which we are subjected in sedentary jobs and in the labor saving contrivances introduced into the home.

Only hard muscular work entails heavy eating. Sedentary occupations call for light diet. Dr. Taylor points out that the amount of daily muscular work being done by the average American man and woman is declining every year.

Every labor saving device introduced into the home reduces the manual labor of household occupations. Our transportation system, communication and business methods have reduced the bodily labors of living, our authority observes. And the automobile has enormously reduced the average annual exertion of walking. People ride to work, in both city and country, instead of walking to it.

Against the numerous items of saving of exertion, Dr. Taylor sees but one factor operating in the opposite direction—increase in sports. But the countereffect is small, he admits. The golf courses, tennis courts, baseball and football fields are not a significant counterweight. And, apart from golf, sports are largely the exercise of youth.

"As to golf," says Dr. Taylor, "the physical exercise of the game, so far as the average player is concerned, is exaggerated; probably the average player, in response to the appetite aroused by the game, overeats enough to make up for the energy expended."

So, it would seem the only way we can beat this muscular effort deprivation is to meet it half way over the dining table.

"It is possible to lose weight on a full stomach," Dr. Taylor points out. "It is in this respect that fruits and vegetables are attractive; they are invaluable for vitamins and mineral elements, but they are also valuable in satisfying hunger and appetite without promoting overweight."

A FRIEND IN NEED

Twin Baby Needs.

"I have twin babies not quite a month old. The days are getting so nice, I would like to take them out in the afternoon, but I have not been able to get a buggy. I would greatly appreciate it if you could get me a twin buggy and also baby scales.

"MRS. M. M."

Having a carriage would make these afternoon excursions pleasant for Mrs. M. M. and healthful for the twins. If you can supply it and the scales you will be helping a great deal.

FARM and GARDEN

CANINE FARM MENACES.

Farmers who find their proximity to an urban area an asset in marketing produce frequently encounter other menaces to their property than picnickers and hunters.

Finding the quail and other game birds to be valuable in combating insect pests in tree and field crops, they are confronted with the problem of protecting them, as well as poultry flocks, against stray dogs, usually from the city.

Ordinarily, the type of shepherd, collie, or other trained dog found on the farmer's own place, or that of his neighbor, have learned from puppyhood the wisdom of molesting no other life than a belligerent cow's tail. But the dogs allowed to run wild from towns or cities are causing much concern among many farmers in northern Illinois and other populating areas. Several county and township groups of farmers have recognized this problem of farm ownership. They have set up organized defense against trespassers. But they still must cope with the canine menace largely as individuals.

Some, fortunate enough to catch stray dogs or cats in the act of unlawful destruction, take recourse to the gun. Others attempt to deal with the animals' owners, if they can be disclosed. Laws of the state are quite specific in protecting owners of sheep against killing dogs, but more technical legal aspects are encountered in protecting wild game.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

GIRL'S DRESS.

This dress will please small girls who like to dress like the grownups. It pretends a bolero through the applied band trimming. The circular skirt, too, has a band at its hipline, achieving the appearance of a fitted yoke. The collar and cuffs offer opportunity for a contrasting color, and nothing is much prettier than white piqué or organdy. Gingham, percale, tub silks, and cotton broadcloth are among the materials that will make up prettily.

The pattern, 3152, comes in sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 35 inch material with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Rich Widow Uses Plane to Express Herself.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"THE GRASSHOPPERS COME," by David Garnett (Brewer, Warren & Putnam), is so unlike "Lady Into Fox" and "No Love" that it is a bit difficult to realize the same mind conceived them all. For the matter of that, "No Love" was not even first cousin to "Lady Into Fox."

Mr. Garnett's new book is a slim, artistic little volume, 143 pages long, illustrated most interestingly by his wife's prints. It does not delve into phantasy at all. It sticks to the earth, or rather, to the air, for it is a narrative of a long distance flight made by three English people, two men and a woman, in a big monoplane built to beat the world's record.

It is beautifully lucid, unemotional prose that attains a remarkable crescendo toward the end of the book, the author weaves his almost plotless tale. The reader is apt to wonder on the first few pages have to do with the point of the story. It is a big part from the description of the grasshoppers swarming on the reeds in the marshland to the noisy activity of the flying school and the variety of airplane motors overhead. And on, and in time you'll see why the grasshoppers are for.

Garnett does toss the little expedition several unsuccessful attempts have been made before to get the airplane ship off the ground, so that the occupants do not even need encouragement to watch their machine, however, they are on hand.

Garnett draws a most amusing picture of the sponsor of the flight, Mrs. Beanlands, a wealthy widow who is using an airplane to express herself, as it were. All her life she has played second fiddle, been a background, an "also present." With the death of her husband she springs into first position and proceeds to soar on the wings of her fancy and a 140 horsepower monoplane which she understands as little as a lady comprehends the mechanism of the watch that makes such a pretty clicking in his ear. With her on this long distance flight she takes one Wilmot Hugh, a gentleman of whom she is much enamored and who is made commander. The pilot is Jimmy Woods, whose war scarred hands have guided many an airplane and whose eye is terrifically keen and piercing.

Jimmy doesn't think so much of Wilmot and Mrs. Beanlands, and they aren't exactly thrilled over him, either. Mr. Garnett devotes the major part of his story to Wreaks, a man to whom adventure is the breath of life, a man of dauntless courage, whose contradictory character combines hardness and fortitude with extremely mediocre qualities found in the most ordinary of men.

There is an exciting catastrophe on this flight, but to tell what it is would be to give the story away, and what's the good of an orange when its juice is gone? Suffice it to say, that you won't put the book aside once you've reached this point.

David Garnett is the son of Edward Garnett, the well known critic and the friend of Joseph Conrad, W. H. Hudson and John Galsworthy. His mother is Constance Garnett, the translator of Dostoevsky, Tolstoy, Turgenev, and other Russian writers. His grandfather was Richard Garnett, the author of "The Twilight of the Gods." His first book was "Lady Into Fox," published in 1922, and was followed by "A Man in the Zoo," "The Sailor's Return," "No Love," and "Go She Must."

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

John Gay's satire on the shortcomings and sins of eighteenth century police and politicians has, in transition to the screen, developed into a queer sort of nineteenth century would-be comedy, concerned with the melodramatic misdemeanors of unsavory folk of a later day. The original had, I understand, sixty-nine songs. The present version is almost musicless. It has lots of beggars, but little opera, and it is utterly confusing to the person who doesn't understand German.

Until I had consulted the program, after the piece was over, I hadn't an idea as to what the thing was about. I recognized much adroit acting and could appreciate the eeriness of some of the sets, and some excellent photography. Also, I gathered that a sort of Fagin ruled a crowd of beggars with a high hand. Other odds and ends, too, I managed to grasp, but as for making any sense out of the story or realizing why was what —NO!

Exploitation of the poor is the motive idea. A beggars' guild is prominent in the picture. The story features collusion between police and underworld powers. King of beggars, gangster chief, chief of police, and, in fact, all other rôles are cleverly portrayed, and Rudolf Förster as the gangster power manages at times to get out from under the heavy direction which weights the work of the other players.

If you are German, and if you witnessed the original opera, which was played in Chicago at the Whitney theater (in the flesh) years ago, this picture may mean more to you than it did to me. I hope so.

See you tomorrow.

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 11.—(Special.)—Clara Bow has saved a quarter million dollars out of her five year screen work under the Paramount contract just broken, and is "happy that I can be independent and never need do any more film work as long as I live, if I don't want to." Her fiancé and business agent, Rex Bell, today said that $250,000 of the actress's earnings are tied up in a trust fund, with a Los Angeles bank as trustee, and Miss Bow is assured a steady income for life.

Ken Maynard, now on location making "The Arizonan" for Tiffany, unwittingly brought a lot of bad luck to his technical crew when he thought he was doing them a favor. Maynard told four of the crew that he would take them up in his plane for a short jaunt when the company knocked off film work for lunch, if they would run out to the hangar. The men never showed up, and when Maynard got back to the film set, they weren't there either. Finally, some hours later, a phone call from Magnolia Park, Cal., informed him that police there, on the lookout for an automobile driven by daylight bank robbers, had sighted a speeding car and jailed the four who turned out to be Maynard's workmen friends.

All studios are curtailing production programs to some extent because of the slump in the theater patronage and box office returns on films. While most noticeable with the Warner-First National combination, where 800 employés in all were let out, and some feature length productions abandoned, Universal today made known that it has cut its schedule of short reel pictures from ninety to twenty-six. Among those given up was a short reel which Amelia Earhart was to do about aviation. Another plan at this studio, to put out tennis short featuring Helen Wills was abandoned for the reason that the studio did not wish to meet Helen's price, which is understood to have been $175,000.

Activity at the United Artists lot has dwindled to nothing except the current Colman-Fay Wray picture, "Unholy Garden," which has been interrupted by a number of temperamental outbursts in which Colman, Director George Fitzmaurice and Estelle Taylor have all had a bit to say.

Universal has registered the film title, "The Massacre at Fort Dearborn," in expectation of expending much time and money on a high class feature picture for release about the time of the Chicago World's Fair. No production plans are going forward on this picture yet. The way the film studios do is to register a title, then search around for a story to fit it, and afterwards engage a cast, scenario writers and director staff to transfer it to celluloid.

Russell Gleason was escorting June Collyer into the Brown Derby café on Vine street for lunch, when friends gasped at the enormous array of gardenias she was wearing, and wanted to know if they had just come from a wedding. "No," said Russell honestly, "there was a man selling gardenias for 5 cents apiece on the boulevard, and it seemed such a bargain I just bought twenty."

Movies Given Censor with Stage Training

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A censor who is "hard to shock" is the recent acquisition of the motion picture board, a branch of the police department.

Miss Frances James, former stage actress, newly appointed by Mayor Cermak as member of the board of motion picture censors, yesterday characterized herself as "a funny person to be on a board of censors." "But," she added, smiling, "I think I'll be awfully good for the board, really."

"I don't believe many things would shock me, if any," she said seriously, "but my intelligence might be insulted. For instance, I voted against a ridiculous picture of white slavery called 'Rio's Road to Hell.' It may have had a swell moral in the end—I really forget—but it was so silly it was funny.

"The picture finally passed the board, after being cut, although I still voted against it. It had passed the Pennsylvania board, considered one of the toughest."

"On the other hand, 'A Free Soul,' in which Norma Shearer plays, is my idea of a good picture. Yet it was allowed to pass the board only on condition it be shown to adults only. It's better to cut a picture and have it for general patronage, in my opinion, as there is the attraction of the forbidden about 'adult only' pictures."

Miss James outlined her theory on what constituted moral or immoral movies. If good taste and intelligence weren't offended, if vulgarities were not introduced, it was possible to make a play with an immoral woman in it perfectly good, and clean drama, she said. She saw nothing to censor in 'The Trial of Mary Dugan,' which was banned here in June, 1929, because, as former Police Commissioner Russell explained, 'Mary was not a virtuous girl.'

"Quite right, she wasn't," Miss James said. "But I felt sorry for her, didn't you? I thought she was an awfully good fellow.

"If we cut everything that might be interpreted as immoral in some way, we would have to eliminate many classics. Shakespeare wouldn't be fit for the screen in that case. I've just been reading Rousseau. Why, our movies are nothing compared to Rousseau."

Greta Garbo, who often plays the part of an unconventional woman, a romantically bad women, is Miss James' favorite dramatic actress. Among the men she admires Paul Lukas, George Bancroft and William Powell. Miss James' family name is spelled "Jaames," but she requested yesterday that the ordinary spelling be used hereafter.

Gas Making Flower Among Features of Garfield Park Display

An exhibition of thousands of spring garden flowers, including one variety that manufactures its own illuminating gas, will be opened to the public tomorrow afternoon and all day Sunday at the Garfield park conservatory under auspices of the Men's Garden club of the Chicago region.

The gas plant is known botanically as Dictannus Fraxinella. Its flower is borne on a spike which on a warm, sultry day liberates gas which can be ignited with a match. The plant suffers no harm while the gas is burning, according to August Koch, chief florist for west parks.

Officials to Dedicate Lincoln Marriage Cabin in Kentucky

Harrodsburg, Ky., June 11.—(AP)—The ceremony in which Abraham Lincoln's parents were married 125 years ago will be reënacted here tomorrow. Representatives of the federal and state governments then will dedicate the Lincoln marriage temple in Pioneer Memorial State park.

The one room cabin in which Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks accepted their vows has been enclosed in a permanent building, the reproduction of an old church. It was built by Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball of Muncie, Ind., in memory of her parents.

Until 20 years ago the location of the marriage cabin was not known. It was found in a remote section of Washington county by N. L. Curry of Harrodsburg.

The cabin was dismantled and brought to Harrodsburg. After being stored for several years it was set up near the Pioneer cemetery on Fort Hill. Deterioration began and a decision was made to enclose the cabin and preserve it for all time.

The marriage ceremony tomorrow will be dramatized by the stage crafters of Transylvania college.

Others participating in the ceremony will be Gov. Flem D. Sampson of Kentucky, United States Senator Alben W. Barkley, ex-Gov. Edwin P. Morrow, Dr. William L. Bryan, president of Indiana university; Mrs. W. N. Doak, wife of the secretary of labor; Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, historian of the George Washington Bicentennial commission, and Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, historian general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the time of the wedding, June 12, 1806, the cabin stood on the farm of Dick Berry, guardian of Nancy Hanks. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jesse Head, a Methodist minister, who then lived at Springfield.

RACHEL HOLMES.

Lack of Iron in Brain Called Insanity Clew

Medical Group Hears of Some New Tests.

Philadelphia, June 11.—(AP)—Dual personality may be only lack of oxygen in the nervous system, and some forms of insanity only a little deficiency of sulphur and iron in the brain.

The indications pointing in this direction were presented to the American Medical association conviction today by Walter Freeman, M. D., Washington, D. C., chairman of the section on nervous and mental diseases.

Dr. Edward Henry Cary of Dallas, Tex., was elected today as president of the American Medical association. He is dean emeritus of Baylor university college of medicine, and he will assume office at the next annual meeting of the association that will be held in New Orleans.

Some types of insanity, Dr. Freeman said, may eventually prove to be nutritional deficiency diseases which can be treated almost as effectively as scurvy and rickets, both at one time a world-wide curse and both now disappearing.

Dr. Freeman's studies were made at St. Elizabeth hospital in Washington. There some sensational advances in relieving insanity by use of caroon dioxide and oxygen gases and amytal recently were made public by him and his colleague, Dr. Karl H. Langenstrasse. The further advances reported today are based on combining with medicine the sciences of chemistry and physics to search for causes of insanity.

Speaking of the dual personality type of insanity, schizophrenia, Dr. Freeman said:

"The rôle of defective oxidation in the nervous system in schizophrenia rests upon considerable evidence and the striking parallels from the chemical standpoint between the phases of manic-depressive psychosis and the hibernation cycle of certain mammals, point to some phasic alteration in colloidal dispersion [changes in coagulation] and electric potentials. In view of its newness it seems desirable to bring before this group a survey of the field.

"Among such reactions may be mentioned electric potential, oxidation-reduction, aggregation and dispersion, hydration and dehydration, sodium-potassium and calcium-potassium ratios.

"Too great a shift from equilibrium in any of these systems is certain to be attended with manifestations of disordered function of the brain.

"Iron and other metallic substances, essential catalysts for the utilization of oxygen, are found in considerable quantities in the cerebral cortex [the master brain].

"The effects of known deficiencies in oxygenation of the brain are often striking. These mental phenomena often can be banished abruptly by supplying an abundance of oxygen to the brain.

"Chemical examination of the brain in cases of dementia praecox has indicated deficiencies in neutral sulphur and in catalytic iron."

Dr. Morris Fishbein of Chicago also spoke. He said:

"The American people are given to all or nothing policies in what they do for health. If they are told the consumption of a certain amount of orange juice is healthful they are likely to drink so much orange juice as to upset the digestion and to make impossible the taking of additional necessary food substances. It must be realized that the human being can take not more than 6,000 calories per day, that the average man eats 4,000, and that probably 2,000 are sufficient."

Dr. Russell Wilder, of the Mayo clinic cautioned citizens to be sure diets are balanced to avoid anemia.

"The woman," he said, "who eats less at dinner than her husband and still gains weight, to the man's surprise, never tells him what was served at the bridge game in the afternoon or what she eats between meals."

He scoffed at the belief fat people are more good natured than slender ones.

Dr. L. H. Newburgh of the University of Michigan declared the entire scientific explanation of why people become fat is because they eat too much.

Alumni Rally to Recall Days of Real Sport

Also Will See Students of Today Graduate.

Alumni of Northwestern university will assemble tomorrow in front of University hall for the annual parade by classes to the gymnasium for the alumni day exercises. It is expected that about 2,000 old grads will be present, with Henry Alonzo Pearsons of Evanston, one of the three living members of the class of 1862, as probably the oldest alumnus on the campus.

The feature of the day will be the fiftieth reunion of the class of 1881. Eight members of the group still survive, and five of those have signified their intention of returning to Northwestern for the occasion. They are Polemus Swift of Oak Park, class president; Frank Andrews of Winnetka; Mrs. A. W. Greenman, Evanston; Claudius B. Spencer of Kansas City, and B. B. James of Whitewater, Wis. This evening they will meet at a dinner at the North Shore hotel in Evanston.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Durham of Evanston will be hosts for a dinner dance celebrating the thirtieth reunion of the class of 1901, at their home at 713 Greenwood avenue.

Among the prominent members of the class of 1911 at the University of Chicago, who arrived yesterday to participate in the twentieth reunion, were Le Roy Baldridge, artist, and Nathaniel Peffer, author, both of New York; Ali B. Mostrum, Detroit; Hilmar Baukage, Washington, D. C., and William Kuh, Marinette, Wis.

Some of the 300 of the original 465 graduates of that year who are expected to attend a stag dinner tonight at the Sherman hotel or a woman's party at the Chicago Woman's club include Richard Atwater, columnist; Dr. Mollie Rae Carroll, associate professor of economics at the university; Conrado Benitez, dean of the law school of the University of Manila; and Paul H. Davis, president of the Chicago Stock exchange.

Britton I. Budd, public utilities executive, this afternoon will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws at the commencement exercises of the colleges of law, commerce, liberal arts, and music of De Paul university, to be held at the Civic Opera house on Wacker drive. The same degree will be conferred on the Most Rev. Samuel E. Stritch, archbishop of Milwaukee, who is to deliver the commencement address, and the degree of master of letters on the Rev. William Schaefers of Wichita, Kas.

Three hundred and eighty graduates of the various colleges will be awarded degrees. The exercises will be presided over by the Very Rev. Francis V. Corcoran, C. M., president of the university. A distinguished guest for the occasion is the Rt. Rev. Edward T. Sheehan, C. M., bishop of Yukiang, Kiangsi, China, head of the most extensive Roman Catholic mission in the orient.

Dr. Franklin Bliss Snyder, professor of English at Northwestern university, was the speaker yesterday at the graduating exercises of the Evanston township high school. Diplomas were awarded to 433 seniors by Francis L. Bacon, principal.

William Henry Browne, for thirty-one years secretary of the college of medicine of the University of Illinois, will be feted tonight by his colleagues at the Palmer house, previous to his retirement from service. He has continued in office, as business manager of all the Chicago departments under three presidents and six deans.

Sixty years after they left the halls of their alma mater, three old men gathered yesterday at the Union station here to make a pilgrimage back to Princeton. All are over 80 years of age. They are Dr. Eugene B. Appleby of Chicago, H. D. Boughner of Denver, and the Rev. A. B. Marshall of Bellview, Neb. Out of 100 members of their graduating class, only 15 are living. How many of the others will attend the sixtieth reunion had not been revealed.

Many friends and former pupils of Miss Flora Juliette Cooke, for thirty-one years principal of the Parker school at 330 Webster avenue, will attend the commencement exercises on Saturday of Lake Forest university. Miss Cooke will be awarded the degree of master of arts by that institution. It will be presented by Dr. Herbert M. Moore, president. The commencement program will be held outdoors on the college campus in Lake Forest. Sixty-six graduates will be made bachelors of arts.

Two Chicago girls, Miss Elizabeth Aimee Sedgewick of Highland Park and Miss Elizabeth Turner of River Forest, were among the 253 graduates of Mount Holyoke at the ninety-fourth annual commencement in South Hadley, Mass., on Tuesday. Miss Turner will hold the position of Y. W. C. A. secretary next year at the University of Colorado.

Class day activities this afternoon will start the commencement program for Lake Forest academy's seventy-third year. More than sixty seniors will receive diplomas tomorrow morning at the graduation exercises, which will be followed by the commencement luncheon and alumni reunion in the gymnasium.

Forty-one diplomas were distributed yesterday to youthful employés of Marshall Field & Co. at the commencement exercises of the junior academy school maintained at the store. David M. Yates, first vice president of the firm, presented the diplomas in the Wedgewood room, where a musical program was given by the junior academy chorus.

SYNOPSIS.

Clare, fifteen year old daughter of Iris de Bertincourt, disappears mysteriously from her home in a remote section of Paris. Iris has been separated for years from her husband, Marcel, a man of great charm but no moral sense. They are cousins and the possibly heirs of their tyrannical Aunt Victoire, the Comtesse de Casielmarrou.

Iris planned to divorce Marcel and marry Maj. Alan Charnwood. Charnwood, about to depart for Africa, postponed his trip to look for Clare, assisted by Tommy Rostetter, a journalist.

Iris moves to her aunt's home and learns that her husband is already domiciled there. He seems to have changed in character, and has taken charge of the search for Clare. Alan meets Marcel at Helen Roderick's, the American woman for whom Iris has been working, and learns that they are friends, unknown to Iris. He recalls having seen Marcel at Le Touquet, gambling heavily and bobbing with a coarse looking couple. That night Alan sees Marcel entering the home of Suzanne Marly, an actress.

A letter is sent to Iris, stating that Clare is being held for ransom. Her aunt offers to pay the sum asked if Marcel and Iris promise to become reconciled. Marcel meets Iris and Alan at Helen's and drives them home. He accompanies Alan to his hotel room. That night an attempt is made to asphyxiate Alan. He moves to Tommy's apartment.

Marcel sent flowers to Iris the night Clare vanished. From Iris' description of the man who delivered them Alan recognizes him as De Bertincourt's companion in Le Touquet, thereby involving Marcel as the suspected instigator of the kidnaping, with the couple, Yvita and Pietro, his partners in crime, the motive being to collect the ransom money. Alan and Tommy set out in search of the couple and learn that they have a half-witted son. Alan decides to hide at the spot in a forest in the outskirts of Paris where Marcel is to deliver the ransom.

INSTALLMENT XLVII.

HIDDEN DANGER.

Charnwood shifted his cramped position and took a small nip from his brandy flask.

For an eternity he had crouched behind the screen of bushes. His legs were numb, the cold of the ground penetrated his clothing, icy drops of dew beaded his coat and clung to the edges of his hair. He longed desperately to smoke, but resisted the temptation, lest the spark of a cigaret betray him, although there was no reason to suppose there was any one about.

Never had he known a deadlier stillness. Occasionally, faint and far off, a motor horn hooted, but between times there was a hush in which the crackle of leaves or the snap of a twig assumed exaggerated importance.

From time to time he examined the luminous dial of his watch, at eleven o'clock deciding that De Bertincourt, if he meant to come, must be well on the way. What luck was Tommy having? He began to fear their plans were a stupid mistake, calculated only to arrest operations. Meanwhile the air had grown very damp, the stars had been wiped out, and bad weather threatened.

The vigil became more and more monotonous, boredom settled over him, and despite the clammy mist, he felt overwhelmed with drowsiness. His head sank. . . . Here, this wouldn't do! He must walk about, stretch his legs, or he would be asleep in two ticks. It could do no harm to take a turn now while the coast was clear, even to smoke, if he kept well under cover.

So thinking, he rose painfully and took a few cautious steps across the stubble of bracken to the lane, where he paused, looking up and down. All serene. De Bertincourt could not possibly arrive for another half hour. He shook himself, yawned, and casting a speculative eye heavenward, reached for his cigaret case. Crack! Pazt!

A bullet whizzed by, missing his shoulder by a hair's breadth. A second sang past so close he felt the wind of it, and before he had recovered from the shock, yet another pierced his hat, wrenching it violently off. Crack—crack! A pair of shots, in breath taking succession.

So quickly had it happened that his only sensation was that of dumb-founded amazement. Rooted to the spot, his hand clutching his own weapon, he strove to determine whence the attack came, till, tardily roused to a sense of peril, he dropped on all fours and wriggled back behind the bushes.

The last echo faded to silence, but he lay still, knowing it would require only a few seconds for his adversary to reload. Not a sound, not even the faintest stir to indicate an approach, yet somewhere close at hand an unseen enemy was lurking with murderous intent, had possibly been waiting for the opportunity to snipe him.

He fixed his eye to a crevice in the hawthorn and swept a steady gaze in each direction, determined to miss nothing.

After several seconds he was rewarded. From the mass of inky blackness which marked a twin beech some fifty yards in front he saw a moving shadow detach itself. Charnwood leaped from his hollow, cleared the intervening space at a bound, and sprinted hotfoot towards it. The figure ducked, ran like a hare. He fired at it twice, and at the second shot it swerved to the roadside and plunged headlong in amongst the trees.

All he had seen was the outline of trousered legs, a flapping coat, and a small, bent head, apparently hatless. He had half a notion that his bullet had taken effect, but there was no way of making sure. Receding noises in the thicket told of a swift retreat. Well aware of his own danger, since he was in full view, and at any instant the hidden one might turn and open fire again, he still ran doggedly along at top speed, hoping for some break in the bushes through which to catch sight of the quarry.

Two hundred yards, but no opening. The padding steps had now ceased. Then the whir of an engine starting caused him to make another spurt, only to see, round the first bend, the meteor-like flash of a disappearing tail lamp. The man, whoever it might be, had got away.

Cursing the pitchy darkness, he went back, found his mutilated hat and examined the neat puncture two inches above the head band. A good shot.

A bullet whizzed by, missing his shoulder by a hair's breath!

that. Once more he had escaped death by the narrowest of margins. Was the hand which had directed this almost fatal bullet the same which had wrenched off the gas cap in his room? he wondered.

De Bertincourt was not due here yet. If he had left the Porte d'Orleans at 10:30, he could not be more than half way. More likely the attack came from a member of the kidnapers' party, scouting for spies. Anyhow, the immediate peril was past.

A large raindrop fell heavily, flattening itself upon his nose. Soon it occurred to him that as his hiding place was known, it was no longer advisable to remain there. He sought a new cover, a little farther from the road, and took up his post beneath the shelter of an oak.

A steady drizzle now descended and lasted throughout the night. From thence on the only sound was the patter of rain on the dead leaves overhead, which provided so poor a canopy that he was presently soaked to the skin. Meanwhile, no further event happened, and when day broke over a wet woodland he was faced with the realization that either he had fallen victim to a well ordered hoax, or else his discovered presence had thrown the scheme into confusion. If the latter was true, as it might well be, what could he say to Iris? How confess to her that his own bungling maneuvers had brought the affair to a premature finish, possibly involving fresh calamity? He felt sick and ashamed, filled with new dread.

But stop! There was a faint chance that, unknown to him, the money had actually been conveyed to the cubbyhole and taken away again. The man who got away might be Lepin himself, although he had not seemed tall enough for him. He made his way through the dripping bushes to the ditch explored the empty cavern, scrutinized the sodden earth for footprints. None appeared. It was quite certain that no one at all had been here.

Sold—completely sold! The ransom had never been delivered, much less claimed. How was this going to affect Clare's return? With the sole idea of learning the worst, he trudged through the pelting rain to Rambouillet, swallowed scalding coffee at the inn, and caught the first train back to Paris.

Thus it was that, shivering in his drenched garments and with teeth chattering like castenets, he let himself into Tommy's flat. A face covered in lather emerged from the bathroom door and a voice greeted him with evident relief.

"Hello, hello! The wanderer has returned! I don't mind saying I'm thundering glad you're safe."

"Safe!" expicded the saturated hero. "O, I'm safe—and so are the criminals, blast their skins!"

Without the least consciousness of his soapy decorations Tommy listened to the account of last night's adventure.

"My word! Didn't I say you were a marked man?"

"Marked or not, I'm a damned unlucky one. I want to hear what happened to De Bertincourt. Did you follow him?"

"Devil a bit. Missed him altogether."

"What! Were you late?"

"No, well ahead of time. He never turned up. Alan, old boy, there's something infernally queer about this business. I——"

But Charnwood interrupted eagerly. "Then it was he who took pot shots at me in the forest! Don't you see! He set out before the scheduled hour, guessing I would be there."

"Be that as it may, I've more to tell you. After I'd given him up I prowled about, wasted a lot of time looking for him, and finally came home. As I walked round the corner of this square, what do you think I ran bang into? His car, in front of Marly's apartment."

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Struck a New Clothes Note.

I was invited to a dinner party, and that morning I took my coat to the furrier's in the building where I work to have the collar cleaned. During the afternoon work piled up and I completely forgot about my coat. About 6 o'clock when I was ready to leave it dawned on me that the furrier hadn't brought it in to me. You can imagine the feeling I had when I saw the furrier's showrooms closed for the night. There I was without a coat and invited to a dinner party.

It so happened that I had an old Angora sweater at the office. I had to take a cab out to the party and walked into the room, filled with about twenty people, all dressed up and wearing an old torn Angora sweater. I can't describe the expressions on the faces of the guests—to say nothing about my embarrassment.

The conference, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president, announced, will be the first of a series of similar gatherings to be held at intervals in various parts of the country. Presidents of all state organizations of the W. C. T. U. are expected to attend the Washington conference.

How to

SUNBATHE HEALTHFULLY AND

avoid SUNBURN

1 In the beginning, expose yourself to direct sun-rays for a short time—until your skin has become accustomed to the sun. In small doses the sun refreshes and benefits. In large doses it burns.

2 To have a safe, comfortable sunbath never expose your skin to the sun while it is wet.

3 While nothing in the world will positively prevent a burn if you expose yourself carelessly, you can avoid an ordinary burn and lessen a bad burn by sunbathing with the skin dried off and protected with an application of Nivea Creme before and during exposure. This precaution will assure you a fresh, healthy and invigorated skin.

Competitive Sports Are Dangerous for High School Girls

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

There is a definite movement afoot among educators to safeguard boys and girls, especially during the last year or so in grammar school and during high or prep school, against the strain of competitive athletics. A recent news item shows that the colleges are taking steps to this end.

The following letter shows how much guidance is needed:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: I have just finished reading your article on 'Danger in Highly Competitive Games for the Young Girl.' May I tell you my story about just what sports have done to me?

"I am 22 and have been working several years. I am married. I attended high school and graduated from a four year course.

"During this period of time I actually lived in the gymnasium. I went swimming every day—as often as two class periods in one day, and also belonged to the life saving class. I have passed both the junior and senior life saving tests. I belonged to the regular gym class, to two athletic clubs, and also studied ballet dancing. I was entered in all class meets and frequently took prizes.

"All through my high school I was actively engaged in competitive sports. At that time I was brimful of pep and health. Why didn't some one tell me to conserve a little of that health for later life?

"Then, during vacations, I entered track and field meets, swimming meets, took athletic tests, and just kept going at the same rate of speed that I kept up all year at school.

"Then I graduated from high school and went to work as a stenographer. The first year it was all right. I kept on studying my ballet dancing. Then the crash came. I had literally burned myself out. One of my lungs had become infected. I had colds continually, one after another. Doctor after doctor was visited. Then I was married.

"And now I am at an age when I should be enjoying life and instead I'm always tired out or have colds or else I'm just disgusted with my condition. I cannot regain the pep and enthusiasm I once had. I'd give anything to feel really healthy.

"Must I continue through my life half enjoying living just because I gave too much of myself to competitive sports, to win a few medals which lie unnoticed and tarnished in a box? I sincerely hope this letter may keep some other girl from wasting her precious health on such useless things."

$100,000 Memorial to Prof. Pickering to Help Amateur Star Gazers

Cambridge, Mass., June 11.—(AP)—Establishment of a $100,000 foundation in the Harvard observatory, to be known as the Edward C. Pickering Memorial, was announced today by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the observatory.

Prof. Pickering was Dr. Shapley's predecessor and before his death in 1919 was the moving spirit in the growth of the American Association of Variable Star Observers.

The memorial has been established by funds advanced by Harvard university, the Rockefeller foundation and the American association. The latter organization consists of more than 300 amateur astronomers throughout the world who collaborate with the Harvard observatory.

The fund will be devoted almost entirely to research in the study of variable stars, to increasing a popular scientific interest in astronomy and to furthering the work of the association.

Horse Show at Knollwood Opens Saturday

BY THALIA

WHAT with the new swimming pool and several live wire committees making plans and arrangements, Knollwood country club is anticipating a gay season. They are to have a horse show on the club grounds tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and in the evening there will be a dinner dance. The horse show will include some of the equitation classes and, besides, some novel classes such as potato races and similar contests. The riders will include Fred A. Poor and his daughter, Miss Betty Poor; E. F. Wilson, Charles Tyler, Mrs. Burton Smith, Mrs. Ray Bathelomay, and John D. Purdy Jr.

Members have been notified that the swimming pool and cabanas are to be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. every day except Thursdays. Then the closing will be one hour later [because of the barbecue suppers to be held on alternate Thursday nights during July and August] and soft drinks will be served in the vicinity of the pool. There is to be a formal opening of the pool some time soon, although it really has been in operation for several weeks. The cabanas on the three sides of the pool and are very gayly painted in green and yellow, with awnings shading the wide walk around the water. The spring-board end of the pool has tables, chairs, and comfortable chairs with bright shade umbrellas in bright colors. The bottom of the pool is painted a real arabian blue, and the whole thing, with flowers, plants, and the velvety green lawn for a background, makes a delightful picture.

Norwood Park and McLaren Schools Win Song Contest

BY EDWARD MOORE.

For three hours yesterday afternoon twenty-three groups of Chicago school children engaged in a choral demonstration on the stage of Orchestra hall. At its end the judges, Glenn Cliffe Balnum of Northwestern university, Mrs. Marion Cotton of New Trier High school, Kenilworth, and Robert Lee Osborne of Proviso Township High school, Maywood, awarded first places to McLaren school, Mary Kernan Trnka, director, representing the fifth and sixth grades, and Norwood Park school, Emily MacMillan, director, representing the seventh and eighth.

"This is the first time that a musical contest has been held by the elementary schools," Supt. Bogan said in a brief speech during the intermission. "We have found that it worked out well in the junior high schools and senior high schools, so we decided to give it a trial in the lower grades. The results have been beyond all expectations. I regard it as one of the most important steps ever taken in music in Chicago, and it is bound to lead to something of great importance in the future."

The contest was sponsored by the division for the advancement of music by Lyon & Healy, and prizes of grand pianos were awarded to the two winning schools.

Each competing school was required to sing two songs, a specified contest song and another of their own choice. For the fifth and sixth grades the contest number was "Patriot's Song," by Lackner, and for the seventh and eighth Barnby's "Sweet and Low." The other schools in the contest were: Fifth and sixth grades, Burns, Columbus, Gunsaulus, Harvard, Hayt, Hibbard, Morrill, Nixon, Oakland, and O'Toole; seventh and eighth, Bryant, Farren, Haines, Henderson, Knickerbocker, Libby, Pulaski, Phil Sheridan, Sumner, Tennyson, and West Pullman.

Stewart Harvey, the prospective groom's brother, is to be his best man. Wedding trip plans are suspended in a quandary between Honolulu and Europe.

Sanitary Risk

in carelessly-made substitutes for Kotex

SAFETY should be your first concern in sanitary protection. Health safety. The kind of safety you are certain of in Kotex, the pad that is used in leading hospitals.

But how about those nameless substitutes, of whose makers you know nothing? What assurance have you of their sanitary safety? Who made them? Where? How? Are you sure you'd use them, if you knew their origin?

There's one certain way of avoiding risk. Ask for Kotex. Genuine Kotex. It's immaculately clean—made by wonderful, patented machines from start to finish, in surroundings of hospital cleanliness.

Kotex is splendidly comfortable. It may be worn with perfect safety on either side. Soft, filmy layers make adjustment easy. Treated to deodorize. Readily disposable.

CHINESE ENVOY QUITS HIS POST AT WASHINGTON

Not in Sympathy with Government at Nanking.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Dr. C. C. Wu, Chinese minister to the United States, resigned his post today rather than ask the state department to approve shipments of munitions to the Nanking government.

DR. C. C. WU. [H. & E.]

In explanation of his move Dr. Wu stated that for some time he had been out of sympathy with the domestic and foreign policies of the government at Nanking. The last straw, he said, came when he was asked to apply for export licenses for munitions which would be used by the Nanking government against the leaders of the group at Canton which have revolted against Chiang Kai-Shek.

In Sympathy with Canton.

Dr. Wu comes from Canton and for some time he has been in sympathy with the movement to overthrow the Nanking government. It is expected that he will be given a prominent position in the Canton government on his return, although he said today he had not been offered any particular post. The resignation of Dr. Wu leaves the legation again in charge of Yung Kwai, a Chinese diplomat who has been in the United States for more than forty years.

Successor Expected to Act.

It is understood that Yung Kwai will immediately ask the state department to approve the export of several shipments of airplanes, powder, and other munitions to the Nanking government. Whether the United States will approve the Nanking request was not disclosed today, although it is believed that no objections to arms shipments to Nanking will be raised.

Immediately after turning in his resignation Dr. Wu took steps to help the Canton government. As his first unofficial act he transmitted a message to the White House from Tang Shao Yi, one of the prominent figures in the Canton rebellion. This communication was an attempt to justify the revolt against Chiang Kai-Shek.

Seeks Return of Concessions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEIPING, June 11.—The Nationalist government at Nanking is expected soon to take steps to reclaim the various concessions to the foreign powers that still remain. Since this involves the Boxer treaty and the indemnities incidental thereto, as well as the legation guards in Peiping, the maintenance of a military guard from Peiping to the sea, and the status of the international settlement and the French concession in Shanghai, the problem is a complex one.

Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia lost all their rights as a result of the world war and the overthrow of czarism. Britain has yielded her concessions at Hankow, Chinkiang, Amoy and Weihaiwei. In Tientsin the British, French, Italians, and Japanese hold firmly and also have military forces there.

U. S. on Rented Ground.

The United States maintains the Fifteenth infantry in Tientsin, but on rented ground. The Boxer concession offered there was refused. The Belgians voluntarily surrendered their concession this spring to the Nationalist government.

The former German, Austrian, Russian, and Belgian concessions are under the Chinese and for a time were administered by special bureaus of the Tientsin police. Last month these special bureaus were formally taken over by the Tientsin public safety bureau. Thus, being under one general direction, the remaining concessions in Tientsin are hedged in by the Chinese authorities and in event of trouble the foreign powers remaining will have increased difficulty in the matter of liaison should the defense of these concessions become necessary.

The situation that is developing in Tientsin has caused the British municipal council there to disband its volunteer corps and to organize a new one to meet the changed conditions. In former years the volunteer corps was composed of foreigners of all nationalities. This is now being changed.

Boy Slayer's Companions Are Released from Jail

Schuyler Pierson, 15 years old, and Earl Corry, 12 years old, who were with Corry's older brother, Varner, when the latter shot and killed Policeman Edward Smith on May 30, after the policeman tried to eject the youths from the swimming pool of the John Marshall High school, were released from the county jail yesterday. Both will be examined by authorities of the Juvenile court. Varner was recently indicted for the murder of the policeman.

Porto Rico Wants Freedom, Hoover Told in Message

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 11.—(AP)—The newspaper La Democracia today reproduced a message sent to President Hoover by Senator Antonio Barcelo, head of the Unionist party, informing him of the party's recent resolution to the effect that granting of independence to Porto Rico would enhance American prestige.

"The Unionist party, the strongest sector of opinion in Porto Rico, yesterday held a general convention in San Juan, resolving that the political régime so far established in our island is an utter and complete failure, and resolving to ask as the only solution to settle our final status the granting of our independence," the senator said in his message to the President.

"This does not imply an inimical attitude toward the United States, whose people ever have and now hold our admiration and respect because of their devotion to democracy, so firmly established by the founders of the republic.

Policy "Has Killed Faith."

"The policy pursued by several administrations and congress itself, forgetting promises advanced by the American commissioners while the treaty of Paris was in the process of drafting, as well as those made by Gen. Miles, commander of the army of occupation when he landed on our shores, and the further subjection of our people to an arbitrary imperialistic government in lieu of the liberal autonomous one granted us by Spain, have killed our faith in any modus vivendi, not depending on our own will.

"We aspire to a status that will make of Porto Rico a sovereign and independent commonwealth, one that would enable us in accordance with our self-determination to look for and obtain remedies, to cure our own ills in our own way and in our own manner, within our own resources and means.

"We prefer, sir, to lead poor but honorable lives before acquiescing in our present serfdom. We are now mere serfs under federal coastwise laws, under a national tariff system, under absentee holding of our richest lands, and under tenancy of large estates by a few nonresidents.

Pleads Political Freedom.

"You told us, Mr. President, when you honored our island with your presence, that our problems were economical, rather than political. The convention of the party over which I have the honor to preside held that without political independence no economical independence can be achieved in Porto Rico.

"This is the best solution for the prestige of the United States before the world, and for the sake of the friendship and affection we have for your great people.

"The foregoing were, in short, the main resolutions of our party. We are ready, sir, to prove our case to you and to congress at the next session should a proper hearing be granted."

Drops Fountain Pen Gun; Is Shot Through Chest

Harry Wahl, 30 years old, of 2235 Warren boulevard, was shot and seriously wounded yesterday when a fountain pen gun fell from his pocket and was discharged. Wahl is a clerk in the Chicago and North Western railroad yards just west of Franklin Park, near the Cook and Du Page county lines. He was walking there yesterday when the novelty weapon dropped. The bullet discharged pierced his lung. He was taken to the Westlake hospital in Melrose Park.

Three Bandits Steal Truck with $5,000 Tobacco Load

Three armed men yesterday compelled Rudolph Rehak, 4422 Augusta street, a chauffeur, to surrender a truck loaded with tobacco and cigarets valued at $5,000 at Paulina and Lake streets. The truck and cargo were the property of the Cassel Tobacco company, 1423 South Halsted street. After forcing the vehicle to the curb, one of the robbers ordered Rehak to drive to Grand and Marmora avenues, where he was released. The men then drove away with the truck.

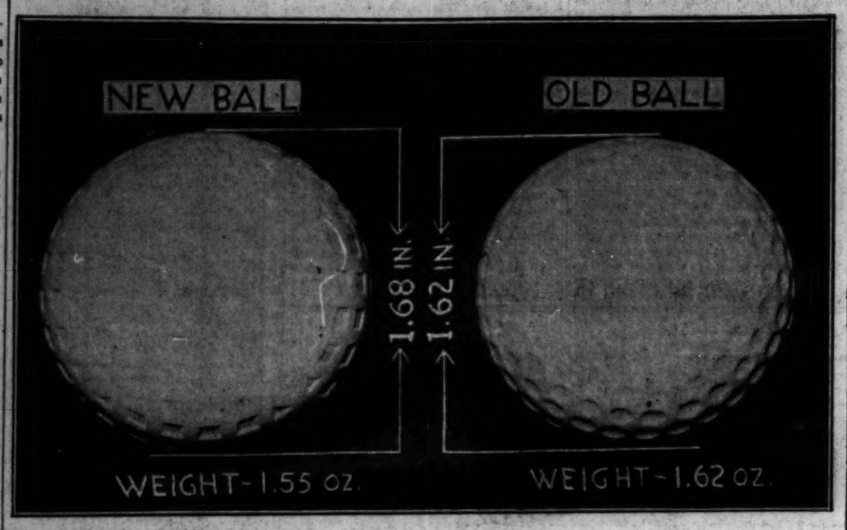
WHEN THE NEW MEETS THE OLD



The new golf ball, which went into effect on January 1 at the order of the United States Golf association, is the source of arguments in clubhouses and locker rooms throughout the United States. Thousands of golfers are content with it, while others demand a return of the old one. And yet the change involved only .06 of an inch in increased diameter and a reduction of .07 of an ounce in weight.

Here's Story of How Golf Ball Is Born

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

What is this new golf ball which has wrought such a to do among professionals, amateurs, women players, and just golfers throughout the United States? The change from the old, made effective by the United States Golf association on Jan. 1 of this year, was only a matter of hundredths of inches and ounces, but that change has caused more controversy among players than any other movement undertaken in the recent history of the game.

The golf ball, to most players, is just the missile which they smack down the fairways or nudge into the cup. Very few realize that the ball they're using requires a process of manufacture so precise and involving such scientific treatment that it is the most intricate in all sport. A tour through the golf ball factory of the Wilson-Western Sporting Goods company, 2037 Powell street, yesterday revealed that 132 separate operations are required to produce the finished product. The Wilson firm was chosen because it chanced to be the most accessible at the time of the investigation.

Golfers to Vote.

The questions arising out of the changed status of the ball will be answered to a great extent among thousands of Chicagoland golfers this week-end when a poll on the new and old balls, taken by THE TRIBUNE in conjunction with the Chicago Daily Fee Golf association, begins. A consensus of daily fee golfers will be taken first, with a poll of private courses and public links following. Blanks may be had at all member courses of the daily fee association tomorrow. When they are filled out, they should be mailed to the golf editor of THE TRIBUNE.

The problem of manufacturing the new ball, following the edict of the U. S. G. A., was explained yesterday by W. L. Robb and J. C. Ewell, officials of the Wilson firm. Both pointed out that the order involved the purchase and installation of entirely new machinery to accommodate the dimensions and weight of the new ball and the junking of equipment used in making the old one. They estimated the cost of this to the golf ball manufacturing industry at $500,000.

Plenty of Time to Change.

Asked what would ensue if the U. S. G. A. suddenly decided a return to the old ball in view of agitation for such a move by certain member districts, both Mr. Robb and Mr. Ewell were emphatic in stating that the association's change of the ball was not based on an overnight decision, and if any return to the old version were contemplated the comeback would be one requiring a number of years.

Experiments with the ball in use today were conducted as long ago as 1925, although it wasn't until Nov. 19, 1928, at a meeting of committees rep-

SHOSTROM OF PARKER HIGH WINS STAGG NET MEET

John Shostrom, Parker High school's tennis star, yesterday won the Chicago regional singles championship by defeating Sidney Weiss of Hyde Park in the finals of the Stagg meet at the Midway, 6-1, 6-2. With his cousin, Trevor Weiss, Sidney Weiss came back to take the doubles crown by nosing out David Cochran and Charles MacClintock of University High, 6-4, 10-8.

The Weiss cousins eliminated Bickel and Charles of Oak Park, 6-1, 6-4, in the semi-finals earlier in the day, while Cochran and MacClintock were beating Winter and Miles of Hyde Park, 13-11, 6-4.

PERHAPS FIDEL BROKE A BONE OR SOMETHING

Physician Comes Forward with Diagnosis.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—There seemed to be something just the least bit wrong with the recent featherweight championship prizefight between Bat Battalino and Fidel La Barba, but I never would have suspected but for a letter in today's mail that the real trouble was a chipping fracture of the navicular bone, one of the carpal bones, to be plain about it, as it articulates with the distal end of the radius, in La Barba's right hand, causing a swelling on the anterior border of the wrist.

Still less did I suspect an incomplete fracture of the head of the fifth metacarpal bone as it articulates with the hamateor or unciform bone, but now that all this is revealed the situation becomes clear.

The natural result, as every one will understand, was great tenderness at the place where the radius bone of the arm articulates with the carpal bones of the wrist, the pain extending even to the other border of the dorsal portion of the hand where the head of the fifth metacarpal bone articulates with the carpal bones.

Indebted to Chicago Physician.

I am indebted to a physician in Chicago, whose name I would not presume to publish, for this explanation of the studious young Californian's apparent bashfulness in a ten round fight that cured some of the most celebrated insomniacs in New York and set them to snoring in stertorous rumbles before the fourth round had passed. The doctor states that he lunched with Fidel not long after the prizefight and, having known him for a number of years, noticed that he was supporting his right wrist and hand with unusual gentleness.

This false movement instantly aroused the doctor's curiosity and made him suspicious of the fifth metacarpal in the region of the junction with the hamateor or unciform. So an appointment was made and Fidel's right was X-rayed, the proofs confirming the worst suspicions of the doctor. Fidel then admitted that he had first experienced discomfort in the navicular near the distal end of the radius and also in the fifth metacarpal in the latter part of the third round.

To Fidel's credit, however, it can be said that he and his manager, Mr. George Blake, scorned to visit the press row after the boxing match to explain matters in the traditional manner, and I might suggest that the boys of the fourth estate owe Fidel and George some grateful souvenir in recognition of this forbearance, else they might never have got home that night. The gift should be something simple, possibly a bronze hamateor or unciform, or perhaps no more than a simple navicular, engraved with the legend, "He busted his hand."

Deterred by Sportsmanship?

But, probably it was only an uncommon sense of sportsmanship that deterred Fidel and George from babbling along the press row that evening about a hand that was no good for fighting after the end of the third. They are an uncommon pair in pugilism and the story of the broken hand is as old in prizefighting as the lady defendant's recital that they struggled for the gun, a shot rang out, the man fell back on the couch and all went blank. So when Fidel chipped his navicular and fractured his fifth metacarpal, he fumbled along as well as he could against a wiry, rough and tumble opponent to the end of a hard half hour and left New York without a word in defense of his wilted prestige.

In this, the boy was a little more sporting than he need have been. It would have been his first apology and every fighter deserves at least one, whereas Michael McTigue was forever exclaiming, "Me hand is hurted," and William Stribling's entire career in New York has consisted of failures with a chest cold or a crippled navicular to account for each.

Sitting beneath La Barba's corner that evening I was impressed for the

Artlett's a Sensitive Fellow; Careful What You Say, Girls

Just a word to the 20,000 ladies' day guests who will be out to Wrigley field this afternoon.

BUZZ ARLETT.

Girls, that great big fellow out in right field for the Phillies may look like a big brute but those who know him well say he's as sensitive a flower as ever bloomed in a big league ball park. And that means that Buzz Arlett IS sensitive.

When you rush him this afternoon to autograph your album or your program or your sofa pillow slip, here are some things that you mustn't ask him, if you want to be nice:

Don't ask him why he played 12 years with the Oakland club in the Pacific Coast league.

He's Not a 260 Pounder.

Don't ask him if it is true that he weighs 260 pounds instead of the 236 officially listed in his personal specifications.

Don't ask him if he is spavined or has flat feet.

Don't ask him if he thinks his purchase price of $15,000 represented his real value.

Don't get personal in inquiring how much he eats at a sitting.

Don't ask him if reports that he is 45 are true when you know that he says he's 31.

Don't ask him if he thinks he has been hitting over his head during the weeks he has been in the "first five" of the National league or that he had to depend on the short right field fence in Philadelphia to get the most of his ten homers.

Cubs Respect Him.

A good tip to you girls would be to treat Buzz just as the Cubs treat him, for they are eminently respectful after an incident in the Cub series in Philadelphia in May. The Cub bench got on Buzz and in the enthusiasm of the occasion some one said something about Buzz's physique and his staying 12 years in the minors, using a naughty epithet in the comment.

Buzz bared his hairy chest and went to the Cub bench and with true hackwilsonian finesse invited the gentleman who had made the crack to step up and take his licking. No one stepped up and ever since the Cubs have been very quiet in the matter of riding Buzz.

Be Sweet to Buzz.

Truth is, ladies, Arlett really is a fine gentleman, is of amazing speed when he gets under way. He spent 12 years in Oakland, five as a spitball pitcher, because he was so popular on the coast that the Oakland management asked an exorbitant price for him until he, like Smead Jolley, threatened to quit baseball unless permitted the chance to display his talents in the majors.

Since you know how sensitive Buzz is you girls will be sweet to Buzz this afternoon, now won't you, girls?

ATHLETIC CLUBS.

THE Chicago Athletic association recently decided to withdraw from participation in outside athletics and to eliminate its so-called athletic membership — club privileges awarded athletes without payment of dues in return for representing the club. This departure from past custom resulted in some internal friction on committees and provoked widespread discussion as to the purposes of clubs of this nature.

The Wake therefore presents the opposing viewpoints without comment of our own. Here is what a member of the C. A. A. majority said to us:

"The C. A. A. members, as a whole, took little interest in performances of our athletic members. They were not our own products but usually college graduates who had been developed elsewhere and so really represented our club in name only. Because of rivalry with the I. A. C. in track and swimming meets, ill feeling frequently resulted. There were traveling and other expense out of all proportion to any benefits received by regular members.

"Another point was the effort made to secure star college athletes. Clubs were practicing what colleges call proselyting when prep athletes are concerned. Promises of jobs often were made. Many of us do not think a boy, having finished school and about to embark in business, can keep up the vigorous training necessary for track and field sport. If he does, he may become what some one has termed 'an athletic bum.' Evils certainly outweigh the advantages, if any.

"When the C. A. A. and I. A. C. were taking star performers developed elsewhere our teams were so strong the smaller clubs and gymnasiums complained they could not compete on an equality and thus we were doing harm instead of good. I think they were right."

"Are college athletes who have made national reputations to drop out as soon as they are through school? They have had supervision and facilities such as only clubs can give. If they are not given athletic memberships they will not join the smaller clubs or gymnasiums. With several years at least left, with perhaps their best efforts to come, they are lost and Chicago prestige suffers in such matters.

"The C. A. A. has right in its own ranks Avery Brundage, who continued his competition for many years, became a regular member and is now president of the A. A. U. After being graduated from Illinois, Brundage was a Cherry Circle performer far beyond the usual time of ex-collegians and always a point winner in national meets. Did he become an 'athletic bum'? Not so you can notice it. He is head of a construction company bearing his name. These Chicago clubs in dropping outside competition have taken a decided step backward."

There you have it, Wakers, take your choice.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

That mighty blond youth, Chuck Klein, knocked his No. 15 homer off Bob Smith yesterday and Don Hurst emulated him with a similar drive a few minutes later. These dramatic incidents didn't keep our boys from winning, for the two homers were all the runs the visitors made, whereas the Cubs wound up the day's endeavor with a total of four tallies.

After scoring one run on singles by Smith and Cuyler and Hornsby's fly in the third inning, the Cubs put over the winning margin in the fourth against Ray Benge, accomplishing two runs after two were out. Wilson singled with one out and after Hartnett had been retired young Bill Jurges socked the first of his two extra base hits, a triple, and came home on Grimm's single to center. The Cubs' run in the eighth was purely a gift and was predicated on two sloppy errors.

Hornsby's Slump Continues.

While the Cubs' total of four runs was meager, considering the amount of socking, the victory was eminently satisfactory for the entire cast. Everybody got at least one hit, except Manager Hornsby, and so long as his club can win ball games Rogers probably won't fret about the prolongation of his astounding batting slump.

Rogers hasn't made a hit in four games and has made only five in the ten games played against eastern clubs. However, he continues in excellent physical condition and is expecting to break loose on a hitting spree that will carry him through the eastern trip which open next Thursday at Brooklyn.

Yesterday's victory gave the Cubs an edge in the season series with the Phillies, 3 games to 2, and kept them in a tie with the Giants for second place in the National league, three and a half games behind the league leading Cardinals. The Cubs have gained two games in two days while the Cardinals were losing to the Braves.

The Cubs will play the Phillies again this afternoon before a ladies' day assemblage, with Guy Bush performing against Ed Bolen, whom the Cubs haven't seen this season.

Smith Scores in Third.

Yesterday's entertainment started as if it were going to be another one of those goose egg chains such as existed until the seventh inning of the opener. The idea of two such battles was dispelled, however, in the third when Smith personally discouraged the pitching duel notion by leading off with the first of two successive singles. Cuyler got the idea right away and slapped a single to right, which permitted our Robert to dash around to third base. English discouraged the plot by fouling to Hurst, but Hornsby knocked a long fly to Arlett and Smith came home after the catch. Further progress of the inning was blocked by Cuyler's ill-advised thought that he could steal second.

Jurges' bat was the dominant factor in the manufacture of two runs in the fourth, which made the score 3 to 0, a figure that seemed more than ample in view of the way Smith had been performing. There was, however, a dash of warmup artists to the bullpen when Klein hit his number fifteen homer with two out in the sixth, and the conduct in the said bullpen was most intense when Arlett drove the ball over the right field wall only a few inches foul. Calm was restored when the remainder of Mr. Arlett's act proved to be just another strikeout.

Ah! More Consternation.

Consternation was renewed somewhat when Hurst got his homer with one out in the next inning to make the score 3 to 2. But from then on the bearing down of Smith was most pronounced, especially in the ninth when Whitney's double with one out was followed by Hurst's third hit, a single to right on which Whitney stopped at third. Two more putouts were accomplished, however, and the Cubs, who had been fortified with their fourth run in the eighth, were enabled to leave the premises with the reflection that they now have won six games of ten played with the eastern invaders.

Prep Track Athletes Open National Title Meet Today

For the twenty-seventh time since 1902, the pick of the nation's high school track and field athletes will begin their annual assault on records today at Stagg field. Nine national prep records were broken at the meet last year, and if past performances of this year's regiment of 520 entrants are any index, at least seven more records should fall today and tomorrow.

Weight men from 24 states will present their missiles for inspection at 1:30 today and the first heats of the 100 yard dash will be under way at 2:30. Preliminary heats in the two dash events and the high and low hurdles will reduce the field to the semi-finalists. No preliminaries will be held in the 440, 880 or mile today, but two separate races, each credited year's pole vault, and a good two mile with a full set of points, will be run in the longer runs tomorrow, with three in the 440.

Limbers Up With Hitch-Hiking.

Fort Collins, Colo., with a squad of 20 men, was the first arrival yesterday, and worked out on Stagg field in the afternoon. The second team to arrive consisted of Maurice Lassiter, miler from Technical High, Atlanta, who reported that he had plenty of limbering in hitch-hiking all the way from Georgia.

One of the records that seems likely to go is the 100 yard dash mark, set at 9.8 in 1923 and equaled in the last five years by Simpson, Tolan, and Metcalfe. Edwin Toribio, entered from Jesuit High, New Orleans, and Crain Portman of Urbana, Ill., have both done 9.7 this year, and they will be pushed to the limit by Randall Herman of Oak Park, last year's winner.

The world's record of :15.1 in the high hurdles, set last year by Charles Casper of Harlandale, Tex., is endangered by Bill Wallace, entered this year from Eagle Lake, Tex., who has done :15 even. In the 220 yard low hurdles Wallace has stepped over the barriers a half second faster than the record of :24 set by Jack Keller, running for East High of Columbus in 1929.

Louis Smith of Greeley, Colo., is credited with :49.7 in the quarter mile, and if pressed by any of the 25 men who have done better than :52.5, may be able to crack the mark of :47.4 established by Ivan Fuqua of Brazil, Ind., in 1929. In the half mile both winners of last year's races are entered, Slats Hardin of Greenwood, Miss., and Tim Quinn of Ludington, Mich. This spring Hardin has bettered his own national record of 1:57.2.

Relay Marks Dangered.

Three relay records tumbled last year, and the class of the current crop indicates that additional seconds will be chipped off the 1930 times. Oak Park has already beaten the 880 relay time set at 1:31.3 last year by Central High, Columbus. The suburbanites nosed out Urbana in the Illinois prep meet in 1:30.3.

Team strength is distributed so evenly this year that 30 or 40 points may win the meet. Points will be given as follows in sixteen events: First place, 10; second, 8; third, 6; fourth, 4; fifth, 2; sixth, 1.

Salem, O., hopes that with Harold Walker, who placed second in the mile last year; William Smith, discus thrower; Beck, who placed in last years' pole vault, and a good two mile relay team, that it may be able to pick up enough points to win. Huntington, W. Va., boasts a four man team which beat six state records last week.

THREE 8 ROUND BOUTS ON CEPAK CARD TONIGHT

Promoter Billy Cepak will stage his first open air boxing show of the season tonight at the Emil Denemark stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue.

A windup of three eight round bouts will feature the program. Johnny Baima, Cicero favorite, and Sid Novak of Milwaukee, Wis., will meet in one of the bouts. Another eight rounder will bring together Haaken Hanson, Norwegian middleweight, and Bud Saltis of the north side. Willie Oster of Boston, who was to have met Jack Gibbs in the other eight rounder, will face a substitute to be announced today.

HARVEY TO PLAY SAINTS.

The baseball team of the Harvey A. A. C. will play the All Saints at the West Harvey park, 151st and Wood street, Sunday.

C. B. Schmidt Wins Rotary Club's Golf Tournament

C. B. Schmidt won the low net prize in the annual golf tournament of the Rotary club of Chicago yesterday at the Itasca Country club. Schmidt's score was 97—17—79. J. Doctoroff, with a 92, took low gross. One hundred competed. Other prize winners were: W. O'Neill, 100—24—76; E. Pietz, 97—26—71; H. Clark, 80; R. C. Darley, 80; J. Beek, 83; B. Stone, 83.

Jones Plays Golf for First Time at Home; Sets Record

resenting the U. S. G. A. and the Golf Ball Manufacturers' association that the new ball came into being. The manufacturers were allowed the period of time intervening between that date and Jan. 1, 1931, to dispose of their stock of old balls. The manufactuerers agreed on Oct. 1, 1930, as the last day on which they would produce the discarded version.

Requires New Molds.

The necessity of purchasing new molds and winding machines for the manufacture of the new ball was explained yesterday by E. C. Goeckel, manager of the golf ball factory. The increased diameter required wider molds for the final process of baking the cover into the core with its voluminous covering of rubber thread.

Mr. Goeckel, who formerly was a baseball umpire and was at one time connected with the manufacture of baseballs, began his tour of the factory with a trip to the shed wherein the crude balata, the substance of which the golf ball's outer covering is composed, is stored. This is imported from various South American countries. The balata is tapped from trees and sent up the river to a central point, where it coagulates into huge, gummy cakes, in which form it reaches the manufacturer.

The jelly like consistency of balata has defied the ingenuity of manufacturers and their technicians to devise a modern method of separating it into smaller portions. Mr. Goeckel said that circular saws and lengthy mechanical knives have been tried on balata, but have failed. They have been forced back to the primitive for results, and the young man in the balata shed yesterday was found using nothing but a wide ax to hack the stuff up into small slabs.

Out of the large quantity of balata shipped to the United States each year, only 30 per cent of it is actually used, because of the many impurities in the original material. A system of heating and chilling vats is used in refining balata, which emerges finally like so many hundred pounds of cottage cheese. Then it is merged with crepe rubber and a whitening pigment, sent through a press, and comes out in square sheets. These are molded into the hemispheres which go to make the final covering.

Four Kinds of Cores.

So much for the balata before it merges with the core and wound thread. There are four different kinds of cores used in making golf balls—solid, semi-solid bag, and molded liquid. The crude rubber is refined and pressed into sheets and later into long strings resembling sausage. These are cut and weighed to the fraction of an ounce, shaped spherically, and after countless tests for resiliency and correct weight, are ready for the winding machines.

The liquid center used in the higher grade ball, containing a chemical mixture, is placed in a refrigerator filled with "dry" ice and allowed to thaw and harden for a considerable period. A glance at the containers of the refrigerator yesterday revealed dozens of little red cores with miniature clouds of frost rising off of them.

The winding process is begun by hand with dozens of feet of thread used to start the business. They are then transferred to a winding machine, where the amount of tense rubber thread in use runs into yards for each ball.

During all of these operations the embryo ball is subjected to countless tests. It is gauged by expert inspectors for its sphericity, its weight, and its hardness. When it has passed these it is ready to don its balata overcoat. This is accomplished by a baking process wherein the threaded core is placed between two of the balata hemispheres and dropped with it fellows into a utensil resembling a biscuit pan. The pans are subjected to a heat of 260 degrees, and while they are baking they also are having the indentations found on the finished ball impressed on them.

Out of each "heat," one of which includes 84 balls, one is cut with a knife and examined for defects in that particular baking. The ball is then turned over to the painters, who apply three or four coats of enamel by means of mechanical sprayers. Between each coat, the ball spends 24 hours in a dryer through which an even temperature is maintained at all times.

The final process includes the stamping of the trade mark on the ball via a die, and the finished dabs of color, called beauty spots, painted in by hand.

Maroons Beat Pat Page and Alumni, 5-3

Pitching for a team of University of Chicago alumni players, Coach Pat Page of the Maroons yesterday held his own varsity squad scoreless for six innings. Then he weakened to allow five runs on six hits. The varsity team won, 5 to 3.

Roy Henshaw allowed the veterans only two hits, both of which were made by Ted Curtis, '21. The alumni lineup was Libonati, '14, left field; Rudolph, '18, right field; Curtis, '21, first; Anderson, '28, short; Boyle, '12, third; Priess, '29 and Kaplan, '29, center field; Lynch, '30, second; Wingate, '30, catcher, and Pat Page, '09, pitcher.

Letter Winners Hold Banquet.

Following the game 300 winners of the varsity letter, twelve of whom competed for Chicago before 1900, convened in Hutchinson hall for the 28th annual dinner of the "Order of the C." Col. H. D. Abellis, head of the Morgan Park Military academy, who won his monogram in football in 1894, initiated 23 new men into the order.

Coach A. A. Stagg named as the eight outstanding Maroon athletes of the year Marshall Fish, Scott Rexinger, Dale Letts, Will Urban, Art Cahill, Bill Dyer, Cornelius Oker, and Errett Van Nice.

Fritz Crisler, Minnesota athletic director, delivered the principal talk of the evening.

Football Prospects Good.

Mr. Stagg reported that Maroon prospects for next year in football, baseball, tennis, wrestling, and gymnastics are unusually good, in basketball fair, and in track and swimming not good. Score of the ball game:

Tug Phillips Wins Decision Over Saguero

Tug Phillips, Charlevoix, Pa., welterweight, whipped Relampago Saguero, Cuban champion, last night in the ten round main bout of the first open air show of the season at the Mills stadium. A crowd of 2,000 watched the fight.

Saguero entered the ring at the start of the bout with a heavy layer of plaster over both eyes, and Phillips launched his attack at these two targets, pecking away at the Cuban's face throughout the first four rounds. Failing to find any evidence of weakness under Saguero's adhesive tape armor, Phillips shifted his attack to the body in the later rounds and devoted the remainder of the bout to punching Saguero's midsection with his right.

Saguero showed signs of aggressiveness after the third round, but slowed up toward the end under the steady beating of Phillips' right.

Edgar Norman of Chicago, weighing 170¾, beat Billy Papke Jr., of California, 172 pounds, in the ten round semi-windup. In the first round Papke knocked Norman down and then added an insult of a bloody nose, only to suffer one in return. During the next three rounds the fighters went into a waltz.

In the late rounds, Norman appeared as tired as Billy.

Bobby Stewart and Billy Gladstone fought a six round draw. Stewart appeared to have all the best of it until the last round when Gladstone opened a cut on Stewart's mouth with a right.

Pep Justo battered Jackie Horner around the ring for the first three rounds of their eight round bout, but in the fourth Justo went to the floor twice for a short count. Justo came back in the last two rounds so strong there was no doubt who was the winner and won the unanimous decision.

Yankees' Bosses Decide Ground's Too Wet for Sox

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—To the man on the street the weather seemed perfect around here today but the Yankees didn't want to play our White Sox. It is possible, of course, that the stadium grounds after two days of rain were too wet for the comfort of the athletes. Then again the Yanks' bosses, with an eye to business, might have figured that a double header later on would draw far more than two single games.

The Sox postponements at this time, whether or not they are justified by inclement weather, are highly acceptable. It is hardly possible that at any time in the future the Chicagoans will be as badly fixed as they are just now. Two of Bush's best outfielders are missing, his two best pitchers are living on their reputations and Lew Fonseca's legs aren't going to hold him up much longer unless he is relieved of second base activities. Fothergill and Appling have bum hands. Outside of this Bush has nothing to fret over.

Ted Lyons seems to have fallen right back where he was during the first few weeks of the season. When he stepped out and won two games in a row it was thought there was nothing to worry about.

His arm has gone dead again and he's pitching solely on his nerve, which is more than some fellows will try to do. If Ted doesn't shake off the ailment pretty soon Bush is going to send him some place for treatment.

If the Yanks' bosses decide they want to play our nine tomorrow McKain will pitch against them. That was Bush's choice yesterday and again today so he is going to go through with it.

All hands in the Sox party are eagerly awaiting possible trade developments. None of them would object being moved over to teams like the Yanks or Senators who are sure to get a slice of the world series money. Bush insists, however, that while he would dearly love to make some deals, nothing of a promising nature has as yet arisen.

MONTANA LISTS COYOTE, HAWK AS PUBLIC ENEMIES

Opens Drive to Protect Game, Song Birds.

BY BOB BECKER.

One western state is now in the limelight of the conservation world by virtue of the fact that it has drawn up a list of "common enemies" [feathered and furred] and now asks residents to get busy and help exterminate the list.

Montana is the state which has taken up arms against common enemies and sportsmen and conservationists see a number of familiar names in the list, which includes the coyote, timber wolf, the weasel, sharp shinned hawk, and other predatory animals and birds which make constant forays against game and song birds.

Vermin-Control Campaign.

The publication of the common enemy list by the department of conservation of Montana was the first step in a vermin-control campaign which is now under way. The department has offered $500 in cash prizes for the organization which scores the most points against the predators in the course of the 1931 hunting expeditions.

For example, a resident who kills a wolf can score 100 points. A crow counts 5 points. A few of the other outdoor "racketeers" whose names appear on the Montana common enemy list and the points awarded for killing them are, as follows: Coyote, 50; bob cat, 30; Cooper's hawk, 10; sharp shinned hawk, 10; great horned owl, 10.

The objective of this state-wide campaign is to reduce the numbers of those animals and birds which annually kill many game and song birds. Canadian provinces have a similar campaign going against the crows which have increased around the duck breeding grounds, where they can destroy thousands of duck eggs.

Pheasant and Weasel Again.

Up our way it is possible to see a graphic exhibit of what a "common enemy" does to a pheasant family. A hen pheasant assured of protection close to a home at the edge of town hatched out a bunch of nine chicks. The other morning the hen was found dead, the result of an attack by a weasel.

TRAFTON TELLS JUDGE WOES OF WINTER SEASON

The vicissitudes of a professional football player in the slack season of his trade were related yesterday to Judge Rudolph F. Desort in the Superior court by George Trafton, 234 pound center for the Chicago Bears.

Trafton is suing his 130 pound wife, Alice, for divorce, charging her with breaking a ginger ale bottle over his head and otherwise treating him cruelly. Yesterday she asked Judge Desort to award her $12.50 a week temporary alimony.

"I haven't got any money—just a lot of debts," objected Trafton. "I went down to Florida last winter on the promise of a couple of fights, but Jim Maloney broke one of my ribs and all I earned was $30 as a sparring partner. Then I tried selling golf balls, but I only sold three dozen in three weeks."

"He's living with his mother at Crystal Lake, and she gives him $50 a week," his wife charged.

"No," corrected Trafton. "Only a dollar now and then."

"That ought to keep you in chewing gum, anyway," commented Judge Desort. He promised a decision on the alimony today.

PETE BOSTWICK SHOWS HOW TO RIDE A 'CHASER

Guides Chenango to Win in Meadowbrook.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—G. H. [Pete] Bostwick scored with another winner at Belmont Park today and appears once more to be safely ensconced as the country's leading amateur rider. Mr. Bostwick gave a masterly exhibition with Thomas Hitchcock's Chenango and won the Meadowbrook steeplechase handicap by four lengths from Joseph E. Widener's Prowler. A distant third was the Greentree stable's Valorous, while Indigo and Brown Ruler, the other starters, did not complete the course.

Veterans Applaud Ride.

It may seem a little early to concede Mr. Bostwick the amateur championship, with the steeplechasing for the year only about half over, but it is safe to say that none will dispute the opinion. He already has a commanding lead over all other amateur riders, and today handled himself and his horse so well that it brought a grin to the faces of some veterans who have seen many a rider boxed and pocketed.

F. Bellhouse, rider of Indigo, and A. Bauman, rider of Prowler, gave the young amateur none the best of it as they bounced, or rather attempted to bounce, him back and forth when he was making his run in the back stretch. The two Widener riders did all they could without resorting to unfair tactics, but Mr. Bostwick was too smart for them.

Race Worth $3,200.

The Meadowbrook was the day's feature and Chenango's run over the long course of 2½ miles was worth $3,200. The gelded son of Hapsburg from Will Return finished the route in 4:56 and was going easily at the end.

Allen's Daring on Spanish Play Whips Pittsburgher

BY FRENCH LANE.

Spanish Play and Jockey Charley Allen were the heroes after the Chicago Retail Coal Merchants' purse, which engaged five leading western candidates for the American Derby, was run at Washington Park yesterday.

Spanish Play took down the purse. Allen rode him so gallantly in the final stages after almost certain defeat faced him that I believe the crowd regarded Allen as a greater hero than Spanish Play.

A sixteenth of a mile from the finish line, after Spanish Play had been leading by not much more than a head all the way, Pittsburgher dashed along and for a few seconds his nose was showing in front. He was running on the outside of Spanish Play and it looked as if he had the little son of Spanish Prince II. crowded back and completely whipped.

He would have been whipped with a less daring boy in the saddle than Allen, but Spanish Play was game and Allen was willing to take a chance. They literally pushed Pittsburgher off and dived through the scant inches which separated Pittsburgher from the rail. The move by Allen decided the issue. Pittsburgher and his jockey never recovered. They saved second money.

There had been the hottest tip of the season on Knights Call, but Knights Call could do no better than third. He ran as if he needed the race to put him in tip top condition. He made one bold challenge in the stretch, but when Spanish Play and Pittsburgher began fighting it out in close to the rail he gave up the struggle and was always at least two lengths back of them.

Spanish Play paid $6.30 in the two dollar betting. He would have been at a much shorter price but for the late plunge on Knights Call. Wouldn't be surprised if the Pittsburghers, Spanish Plays and a lot of other western 3 year olds should look out for Knights Call the next time they face him.

There were more than 300 Chicago retail coal merchants in the crowd. They were the guests of Stuyvesant Peabody, vice president of the Washington Park Jockey club. Of course they bet on Pittsburgher and Burning Up. The latter ran fast for a time but finished out of the money. Tough day for the coal dealers who tried to make their hunches stand up.

Folks couldn't believe their eyes when they watched a two year old filly, which looked just like famous old Princess Doreen, parade to the post in the Cherry Hill purse.

They glanced down at their programs and discovered that this robust bay filly called Mary Borah was a daughter of Princess Doreen, the first child that noted old mare has sent to the races to carry on for her. The daddy of Mary Borah is the great speed horse, High Cloud.

Mary didn't run like her illustrious old mother, and wound up last in the field of a dozen. Suns Son, the California colt, was the winner at odds of 4 to 1. Mary appeared to be a little high in flesh and raced greenly. She looks too much like her mother to finish so far back many more times.

Joey Bibb, the Chatterton colt, which races for C. C. Van Meter of Kentucky, proved again yesterday that he is a corking stretch runner.

Heading for home in yesterday's fourth race he was far back of Royal Ruffin, Black Belt and Downpour. He didn't let this little handicap of some eight lengths scare him. He began to move along in gigantic stride out in the middle of the track. Joey is a hard working fellow when he settles down to some running. His game effort won him the cheers of the crowd even though he was not among those backed by most of the spectators. He got up in the last sixteenth to trim Royal Ruffin and Black Belt quite handily. Try It, another noted stretch runner, in the same struggle, didn't put on his specialty and finished far back.

Joey Bibb is pretty good at a mile or better against those kind of horses.

STOCK MARKET CREDIT NOW AT NEW LOW LEVEL

Brokers' Loans Off 49 Millions.

The volume of credit devoted to stock speculation in this country hit a new low level last week, it is shown in the weekly report on brokers' loans which was issued yesterday, revealing a further recession of $49,000,000. The total now stands at $1,490,- which is the smallest since the method of compiling the data was initiated. The current total is $2,000,000 below the amount of brokers' loans at this time last year.

While the interior and New York banks reduced their loans, the report showed. The New York banks are now lending $2,- less than a week ago, or a total of $777,000,000. The nonbanking institutions, including corporations, how- are now lending $7,000,000 more than last week, with a current total of $76,000,000.

Bank Borrowings Rise.

A further demand for credit pur- poses was manifested last week, it is indicated by the weekly report of the Federal reserve system. Member bank borrowings increased $11,929,000 to a grand total of $1,184,755,000. During the preceding week member bank bor- rowings increased over $19,000,000.

The reserve banks, however, reduced their holdings of bankers' acceptances $7,000,000, with the total now stand- ing at $387,337,000. Note circulation, on the other hand, expanded $58,265,- 000 and now stands at $1,641,949,000. Holdings of the banks showed a decrease of $248,327,000 to $2,440,- 000,000. Gold reserves at the close of the week were $3,277,003,000, or a gain of $17,882,500 over the preceding week. Total reserves showed a cor- responding increase. The reserve ratio stood at 81.3 per cent from 90.4 per cent at the close of the preceding period.

Deposits Decline.

The weekly report of the New York Reserve bank showed a decline of $22,000,000 in member bank borrowings to $73,661,000, and the bank disposed of $7,561,000 in bankers' acceptances, the institution now holding a total of $31,170,000 of those obligations.

Deposits of the bank dropped $36,- 124,000 to $1,819,005,000. Reserves re- ported $9,094,000 from the previous week's total. The reserve ratio at the close of the week was 81.3, against 90.4 a week ago.

GERMAN MARK IS FORCED DOWN TO 23.70C LEVEL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11. — Pressure against German exchange resulting from the flight of short term foreign capital away from that country be- came more acute yesterday, forcing the mark down to 23.70 cents in this market, the lowest price quoted since July 13, 1931.

At the same time the Reichsbank took additional steps here and abroad to meet the heavy demand for foreign exchange by selling $4,882,000 of gold held under earmark at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and ship- ping $5,000,000 gold to the Bank of England in London. Among foreign exchange dealers it was reported that the Federal Reserve bank has begun to purchase mark bills in an effort to relieve the situation. Officials of the bank, following their usual policy, refused to state whether or not this was so.

The final quotation for the mark was 23.7134 cents, representing a net decline of 1½ points for the day. The position in German exchange car- ried the mark below the level at which gold could profitably be shipped from Germany to this country. Bankers here are of the opinion, however, that shipments are unlikely to be made. In view of the difficult situation in Germany it is felt that gold shipments at this time would be unfortunate, particularly since the United States has more gold than it needs or wants.

Says Canadian Railway Structure Needs Revision

OTTAWA, Ont., June 11.—(AP)—Re- vision of the Canadian National Rail- way capital structure is needed, Sir Henry Thornton, president of the road, today told a special parliamen- tary committee. In some respects, he said, the capital is too high and does not reflect the true financial worth of the property. But even without a revision of the capital structure Sir Henry expressed confidence that the road, with a return of prosperity, would be able to make substantially better returns than at present.

Would Stop Redemption.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 11.—(AP)—A supplement to the budget moved today by H. H. Spencer, United Farm- ers of Alberta member, would sus- pend redemption of dominion notes in gold. He said the present financial stability of the dominion was more assured than that which prevailed in 1914 when the government suspended redemption of dominion notes in gold.

Western Union Reports 6 Months' Net as $2,228,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—The Western Union Telegraph company reported a decline in April operating in- come for the four months ended April 30, 1931, to $2,228,000, from $2,554,000 in the same period of 1930. Gross revenues for April were $8,672,000, against $11,400,000 in April, 1930, and gross revenues for the four months amounted to $37,550,000, against $44,- 000,000 in the corresponding period of 1930.

Says New Law Will Raise Standards of Real Estate

BY AL CHASE.

Passage by the state senate of house bill No. 500, composed of amendments to the brokers' license act, will raise the standards of the real estate business in Illinois, accord- ing to George F. Nixon of George F. Nixon & Co., president of the Illinois As- sociation of Real Estate boards. The measure was passed by the house on May 19 and has gone to the governor for his signature. The act, as amended, provides for a compe- tency test.

"The passage of this bill by the senate," said Mr. Nixon, "marks the successful culmination of an effort continued by the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards for the last six years.

Test for Competency.

"In supporting this legislation the real estate boards of Illinois gave com- plete coöperation and showed the cour- age of their convictions in making a fight marked by enthusiasm and con- fidence under circumstances where it took courage to make the necessary effort to win. These real estate boards are to be congratulated, for enactment of the bill into law will raise the standards of the real estate business in this state and will put Illinois on the same basis in this respect as that of 20 other great states."

Three amendments embody in the act the test for competency. One of these amendments provides that "on or after Sept. 1, 1931, every person who applies for original registration as a real estate broker shall, if re- quired by the department, personally appear before the department of reg- istration and education for examina- tion by said department to determine his competency.

"No original certificate shall be granted unless the applicant gives satisfactory proof, in addition to all other requirements of this act, that he has been legally engaged in the real estate brokerage business for not less than one year immediately pre- ceding the date of filing his applica- tion for a license under this section, or in lieu thereof establishes his com- petency by satisfactorily answering questions prepared by the department, either orally or in writing, as may be determined by the department, giving proof that the applicant has a fair understanding of the principles of the real estate business."

Must Publish List.

The second of the three amend- ments reads: "And shall cause said rules and regulations to be printed and shall be required to furnish each applicant for a certificate with a print- ed copy of said rules and regulations upon the receipt of the application, and upon the payment of the regular original or renewal registration fee, and no rule or regulation of the de- partment shall be enforced unless so printed and furnished."

The third amendment requires that the list of licensed brokers be pub- lished annually by the department of registration and education.

Ten Years Ago in Finance

The decline from the peak in the average prices of American commodi- ties is variously estimated at from 37 to 47 per cent.

Chicago bank clearings were $75,- 916,720 compared with $107,565,603 on the same day in 1920.

Money is steady in Chicago; com- merical paper 7@7½ per cent; 7 per cent on collateral.

Cities Service breaks 70 points to 140 on the New York Curb Exchange as the result of an announcement of plans to pay dividends in scrip. "Demoralization in the oil industry" was blamed for the recession in earn- ings.

More than 100 stocks sold at new lows for the year on the New York market.

Foreign trade for May, 1921, shows exports $10,000,000 smaller than in April and barely one-half January's total. Imports are down $46,500,000.

Volume of Department Store Sales Shows Drop

Preliminary figures on the volume of department store sales show a de- crease of 6 per cent from April to May on an average daily basis. The federal reserve board's index, which makes allowance both for number of business days and for usual seasonal changes, was 95 in May, on the basis of the 1923-1925 average as 100, com- pared with 106 in April and 97 in March. In comparison with a year ago the value of sales for May, ac- cording to the preliminary figures, was 14 per cent smaller, and the aggregate for the first five months of the year was 9 per cent smaller.

E. O. Sessions Leaves to Make Survey in Russia

E. O. Sessions, head of the Sessions Engineering company, has accepted the invitation of the soviet govern- ment, through the Amtorg corpora- tion, to visit Russia for the purpose of making a survey of the industrial trusts operating in that country and a general study of the five year plan. Mr. Sessions has served as consult- ing engineer for several large auto- motive, steel, and rubber corporations in this country. He is now en route to Moscow.

FARM BOARD TO AID 1931 WOOL MART PROGRAM

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—The farm board has made arrange- ments to assist the 1931 marketing program of the National Wool Mar- keting corporation, the national sales agency of Wool Coöperative.

Carl Williams, acting chairman, said today the corporation will ob- tain up to 65 per cent of the value of the wool through commercial banks. The board will loan an additional 15 per cent. In no case will the total loan exceed 80 per cent of the value at delivery time. No arbitrary price will be fixed for loan purposes.

Williams said the board had made no plans for stabilizing the wool price as in the case of wheat and cotton. The coöperatives expect to handle a larger volume of wool this year than last, when about 130,000,000 pounds of wool and mohair were marketed co- operatively.

Harris Trust and Savings Declares Usual Dividend

At the meeting of the board of di- rectors of the Harris Trust and Sav- ings bank a quarterly dividend of 4 per cent on the capital stock was de- clared payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 16. Earnings for the first five months of 1931 are reported to be substantially in excess of divi- dend requirements for the six month period.

Directors of the National Bank of Republic authorized the regular quar- terly dividend of 4 per cent on the $20 par value stock.

General Motors Dealers Sell 122,717 Cars in May

New York, June 11.—May sales of General Motors dealers to consumers in the United States amounted to 122,717 cars, compared with 135,663 in April and 131,817 in May last year. Sales by General Motors to dealers last month were 136,778 cars, com- pared with 132,629 in April and 136,- 169 in May of 1930. Total sales to dealers last month, including Canadian sales and overseas shipments, were 153,730, compared with 147,483 in the corresponding month last year.

LIMITATION STATUTE PRESENTS OBSTACLE IN RICHFIELD PROBE

Los Angeles, June 11.—(AP)—While authorities began the task of sifting records of the Richfield Oil company of California for evidence on which to base prosecution of former officers and employés allegedly responsible for a deficit of more than $54,000,000, the California statute of limitations arose today as a possible obstacle.

Robert P. Stewart, chief deputy district attorney, and Bonner Richard- son, deputy, who are handling inves- tigation of maladministration charges lodged by R. E. Haight, state commis- sioner of corporations, said under the statute of limitations, prosecution on alleged stock juggling charges would be outlawed June 16.

They said a special session of the grand jury would be necessary to ob- tain an indictment against former of- ficers or employés of the concern. In order to file an information, they said, a complaint and preliminary hearing for those accused would be necessary.

They expressed doubt that sufficient data could be uncovered from the mass of records on which they could act on the alleged violation of the state securities act. The permit at issue was given the Richfield company in Sacramento June 16, 1928, and paved the way for issuance of 100,000 shares of Richfield common.

Haight charged violation of the state securities act in that the permit called for a cash consideration on each sale of the stock of a ten per cent down payment and 18 equal monthly pay- ments, but this consideration was not given in some cases prior to delivery of the shares.

Reports Hudson Motor Sales Ahead of 1930

William J. McAneeny, president and general manager of Hudson Motor company, said sales for the week end- ed June 7 showed an increase of 30 cars over the like week last year. This is the first time this year Hudson and Essex have reported an increase over a year ago.

Rail Chiefs Vote to Ask for 15% Boost in Rates

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Representatives of eastern, southern and western rail- roads, conferring at the Hotel Bilt- more, today voted unanimously to apply to the in- terstate com- merce com- mission for per- mission to in- crease freight rates 15 per cent.

JOHN J. PELLEY.

The formal ap- plication, it is ex- pected, will be filed with the commission early next week.

Reports that the railroad men would act to have rates increased brought a brisk rally in rail shares on the New York Stock exchange. Gains of 2 to 5 points were scored by such representative stocks as New York Central, Atchison, Southern Pacific, Rock Island, Baltimore and Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Chesapeake and Ohio. The rest of the market devel- oped a strong tone in sympathy with the rails.

Issue Statement.

The following statement was issued by the railroad men's conference:

"At a meeting today of executives of the eastern, western and southern groups, it was unanimously decided to apply to the interstate commerce com- mission and to the state commissions for a 15 per cent increase in all freight rates and charges.

"A committee consisting of the chairmen of the three groups was authorized to prepare and file a joint application with the respective com- missions. It is hoped that this can be done within a week.

"The application will contain a full statement of the reasons for the ac- tion of the carriers. Measures will be taken to afford the public adequate ac- cess to the statement and the appli- cation of the carriers."

The petition will be drafted by John J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, chairman of the eastern group; Henry Scandrett, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, and W. R. Cole, president of the Louisville and Nash- ville.

Suggest Varied Rates.

It was suggested at the conference that freight rates be varied in such a way that the result would not be a division of traffic toward competing forms of transportation.

The eastern committee consists of Mr. Pelley, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio; Patrick E. Crowley, president of the New York Central; J. A. Davis, president of the Deleware, Lackawanna and Western; J. J. Burnet, president of the Chesa- peake and Ohio, and Elisha Lee, vice president of the Pennsylvania.

RADIO INDUSTRY FINDING ITSELF, MAKERS TOLD

While the radio industry was among the first to feel the effects of the downswing that started late in 1929, its ability to quickly adapt itself to the new conditions holds out a prom- ise of cheer for the near future, L. F. Muter, Chicago, chairman of the cred- it committee of the Radio Manufactur- ers' association, asserted in his report yesterday.

In the matter of failures during the last year the industry has been quite fortunate, Mr. Muter declared. Meas- ured in the amounts involved in the failures, the total has been consider- ably below the average for all other industries, he stated.

"In considering," he said, "that the radio industry is comparatively young and that we were the first to feel the unfortunate conditions of November, 1929, this record should offer great en- couragement to all as it fundament- ally means that we have adapted our- selves to conditions faster than the older industries which will undoubted- ly react to our benefit in the near future."

FRENCH LINE'S "SUBSIDY" MAY BE 13 MILLIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 11.—The grave extent to which the mighty French line has fallen a victim to the general depres- sion, which was hinted at yesterday when Premier Laval suggested to the chamber of deputies finance commit- tee a reorganization of the company and a government subsidy, became plainer today.

The company has been compelled to take 30 passenger and freight vessels out of its service during the last year. The freight hauling crisis especially has hit it hard. Furthermore it is faced with the need of constructing a certain number of new units in order to compete with the German and British liners. The superliner now under construction at the Saint Na- zaire yards will cost $24,000,000. The proposed subsidy for the line is re- ported to be $1,000,000 yearly for four years and then $800,000 during a further 12 years, a total of $13,- 600,000.

A. & P. Sales Slightly Off in May as Tonnage Gains

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company reported for the five week sales period ended May 30 sales of $102,946,053, against $104,673,214 in the corresponding period of 1930, a decrease of 1.65 per cent. Tonnage sales for the period were 563,223, as compared with 483,753, an increase of 16.24 per cent.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—Up to the last thirty minutes or so, when a smart little rally got under way, today's stock market was about as stale, flat, and unprofitable an affair as the map could show anywhere. Interest was so slight on both sides of the specu- lative fence that traders had to pinch themselves every now and then to keep awake. Most of them seemed content just to sit tight and await developments — which wouldn't de- velop.

The market evidently has settled into that trading range which close observers have been anticipating, re- flecting the subsidence of recent bear- ish activities and the checking of the liquidating movement in consequence of the recovery movement which has lifted stocks substantially from the lows of the decline reached early last week.

Forces committed to the construc- tive side seemingly are not concerned with attempting to drive the list ahead spectacularly in lieu of supporting news from the outside, but rather are satisfied with endeavoring to keep the situation on an even keel. The bears, on the other hand, got their fingers burnt rather sorely last week and, in view of the talk of bankers' support for the list here of late, are obviously loth to start anything of a serious nature at the moment.

In Professional Hands.

The public is showing only a meag- er interest in the proceedings, thus leaving the market almost entirely in professional hands. Today's turnover was only about 1,700,000 shares.

Outside of the Southern Railway dividend announcement there was lit- tle or nothing in the news to furnish a cue to the direction of what faint breezes were stirring. The financial disturbances out west are apparently cutting little ice either way.

The Southern Railway statement saying no further dividend payments are contemplated on the common stock over the balance of the year caused some unsettlement in the railroad group for a time, but the flurry was short lived and the close found most issues of the division again going strong. Southern Railway itself, after dipping about three points, rebounded with sufficient vigor to record a frac- tional gain on the day. Southern Pa- cific advanced 4 points; Atchison, 5½; Illinois Central, 2; Union Pacific, 5;

BURNHAM ISSUES ARE WEAKER IN CHICAGO TRADING

Other Prices Irregular in Quiet Dealing.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A day of irregular price movements and quiet trading on the Chicago exchange yesterday was marked by group weakness in the "Burnham stocks." The market in these issues was thin and the recessions in one or two of the stocks were sharp.

News of the day was such as to provide no particular incentive for operations either on the long or short side. The adverse nature of the dividend announcements tipped the scale to favor the bear side, but important selling was forestalled because of the present depressed condition of the market and the opinion among traders that profits to be obtained on the short side of the market at the moment are meager.

Watch Rail Conference.

The trading community watched with much interest the outcome of the rail conference in New York in the hope that it might be the signal for a turn in the market. The late upturn in New York in anticipation of the rail chiefs' decision did not extend to the Chicago list, however. The late trading here furnished nothing to change the character of the day's proceedings.

The decline in Noblitt Sparks, one of the issues with Burnham banking sponsorship, amounted to a wide open break. The stock plunged from its perch at 35 to close eight points lower on a turnover of less than 1,000 shares. The sharp recession gave rise to the belief that the company will not maintain its present dividend rate of $3 a share in addition to stock distributions. Burnham Trading was dealt in in light volume at $1 a share, unchanged from the previous price.

Kalamazoo Stove Weakens.

Kalamazoo Stove was another Burnham stock to suffer on an even lighter trade than Noblitt. The final quotation of 14½ represented a new low for the stock and a net loss from the previous price of 2¾ points. Another issue of the group, National Standard, dipped 2¼ points on a similarly moderate volume of transactions. Some connection was seen between the weakness in the Burnham stocks and the omission of the Real Silk dividend, another related concern.

The price changes among the customary leaders were slight, with the Insull stocks holding about steady. The heavy turnover in Grigsby-Grunow was one of the features of the trade. This stock, which has been quiet for months, turned over to the extent of 8,500 shares. After selling above the stock reacted to finish only slightly above its previous price.

As a result of the unfavorable price situation in meat and livestock and the necessary inventory revisions the directors of the Rath Packing company have omitted the quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock. Tonnage volume is holding up well, it was said, and steadier meat prices give promise of more profitable operation during the remainder of the year.

Stockholders of the Saxet company voted at a special meeting to change the name of the company to Republic Gas corporation, to become effective on June 15.

SARGENT CITES MENACE OF GOV'T IN BUSINESS

Retards Prosperity, He Contends.

Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western railway, last night denounced government competition with private business as the most detrimental influence against the return of prosperity. Mr. Sargent was the principal speaker before members of the Economic club meeting in the Stevens hotel.

"Government in business is a form of competition," he said, "the risk of which private investors never have had any right to believe they would have to face. When the public generally becomes imbued with the fear that their government is going to destroy their investments by entering every field of competition, then those investments will cease and seek refuge in other quarters and the main cause of prosperity will be dried up.

Not an Ordinary Risk.

"Government competition does not fall within the class of ordinary risks which investors take when they embark upon any enterprise. Every citizen has the right to expect that his government will not use the power which it has over him, and over the business, the savings, and the investments of all the people to destroy a part of the prosperity of the future of America. The hope for the future of American initiative and enterprise will be sufficient support to enable him to translate into practical results the principles he expressed as secretary of commerce in 1924 when he declared against nationalization of utilities.

Assails Chair Pamphlet.

"The government is business to a certain extent, as witness the government barge line operated by the Inland Waterways corporation, which is now under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. Another example is the government publication, which is now in circulation to the extent of 130,000,000 people how to repair rubber chairs. Have our people become so childish, helpless, and dependent that the government must rock them to sleep?

"We are in the midst of a depression. Many of our people are suffering. But the remedy will be found in the government activities, not in the cessation of them. If the tax burden that hangs like a threatening cloud over American farms, homes, and industry could be lifted, then we would begin to feel the first real healing rays of the sunshine of prosperity."

As specific instances of government competition with private business, Mr. Sargent cited the wheat buying of the federal farm board, the competition in transportation carried on by the postoffice department, and the building of barge canals and subsidizing of barge lines with public funds.

Expresses Confidence.

Linton Tater, president of the Chicago Trust company, who was retained as the club's president, expressed confidence in the return to normal business conditions.

"We will come out of this tailspin both locally and nationally," he said. "And courage and persistence will be great agencies in bringing about the change.

Other officers chosen by the club are: First vice president, George W. Dunfee; president of the consolidated corporations bearing his name; second vice president, Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the board of the Hurley Machine company; and former chairman of the shipping board; secretary, Robert S. Pyle, of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., and treasurer, William J. Kelly, vice president of Arthur J. O'Leary and his company.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP)—Bleachable summer oil closed very steady today, 14 points down to 1 point decline. Sales were 900 barrels. Strength of lard and the cash situation together with reports of sales of 1,000,000 barrels of crude cottonseed oil here or in the interior, brought about the advance.

There was a tendency to wait the census report on the estimated consumption and stocks of cottonseed, cottonseed products and linters, tomorrow. The trade is anticipating a consumption of 225,000 to 230,000 tons. Consumption 271,186 last month and 304,000 during May last year. The cottonseed crushing will not open until 11:15 a. m. tomorrow instead of the usual time of 9:45 a. m., in order to trade on the report.

Sales: bleaching spot closed, Oct., 8.35c; Sept., 7.00c; Dec. and summer yellow contracts were nominal with closing prices as follows: 6.75c; July, 8.70c; Sept., 7.00c; Oct. and Jan., 6.20c.

New York Central, 3, and Norfolk and Western, 9½ points. Soo Line preferred sold for the first time this year. The price was 8¼; a drop of 36¾ from the previous sale. The stock is owned mostly by the Canadian Pacific.

Feel Selling Wave.

Gold mining stocks were still feeling the shock of the sudden and heavy selling which struck them yesterday. Alaska Juneau again was the most active. The crowd around the Juneau post late yesterday incidentally was the largest seen trading in a single stock in a long while. Street gossips had a good deal to say about a certain difference of opinion which developed among members of the pool in Juneau. Weakness in other gold mining shares seemed to be largely a sympathetic one.

Industrial favorites found the sledding heaviest in the day's operations. Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, McKeesport Tin, and others of similar rating fell back from 1 to more than 2 points in the earlier dealings, but some of them managed to all but wipe out their losses in the last hour recovery movement.

Amusement stocks showed some pep under the leadership of Fox Film, which had the benefit of yesterday's surprise declaration of a 62½ cent dividend. Fox itself gained nearly 2 points on the session's turnover.

Steels, particularly United States Steel, were inclined to heaviness. Motor and oil shares did little.

SOUTHERN ROAD 35 CT. DIVIDEND IS YEAR'S FINAL

Directors Will Wait for Better Times.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—Directors of the Southern Railway decided today to declare a dividend of 35 cents a share on the common stock out of the remainder of 1930 earnings and at the same time announced that no further dividends are contemplated on the common stock for the current year.

The board also indicated that the subject of restoring to the unappropriated balance of 1930 earnings for dividends on the common to be paid in 1932 would be considered at its December meeting in the light of conditions and prospects at that time.

At their meeting in December, 1930, directors declared as dividends on the common the remainder of income of 1929 not previously appropriated for this purpose. This amounted to $3.65 a share, of which $2 was paid on May 1 and $1.65 to be paid on Aug. 1 to owners of record July. Today's declaration will increase the amount to be paid on Aug. 1 to $2 a share.

Vote Regular on Preferred.

The company announced last December that the board would review the situation at its June meeting and then determine to what extent it would be proper to supplement these dividends out of the $4.75 a share available for 1930 results.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share was voted on the preferred stock out of 1930 earnings heretofore appropriated for that purpose.

The Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville, controlled jointly by the Southern railway and Louisville and Nashville, decided today to omit the semi-annual dividends of $2.50 on the common and $2 on the preferred stocks.

A statement similar to the one made by the board of Southern was issued in connection with this action. The board will review the situation at its December meeting to determine further dividends on the shares of the company.

I. T. & T. Pays Regular.

The regular 50 cents quarterly dividend of the International Telephone and Telegraph company was declared by the directors yesterday. The dividend is payable July 15 to stockholders of record June 19. The first quarter consolidated net income of the parent organization and associated companies was $2,832,302, or 43 cents a share, compared with $3,353,739, or 57 cents a share, for the like quarter of last year.

The board of Devoe & Raynolds voted today a quarterly dividend of 15 cents on the outstanding shares of classes A and B stock. This places each class on a 60 cent annual basis, against $1.20 a year heretofore. Regular quarterly dividends were declared on the first and second preferred issues.

Singer Pays Extra.

The Truscon Steel company voted today two quarterly dividends of 15 cents each on the common stock, equal to a 60 cent annual basis, against $1.20 previously.

The Singer Manufacturing company declared the usual extra dividend of $2.50 a share, besides the regular quarterly dividend of the same amount, both payable June 30 to owners of record June 10.

A participating dividend of 50 cents a share and regular quarterly of $1 were declared today on the class A stock of the Associated Telephone and Telegraph company. Regular quarterly dividends were declared on the preferred issues.
